'Kiki' Denies Part in 'Legs' Diamond Slaying

MITCHELL SEES REVOLT ON WAR DEBTS

Today

Jack Diamond's Last Rap. Now Fainting, Now Dancing. To Restore Hapsburgs, It Pays to Improve.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AT LAST Jack "Legs" Diamond is really dead. And New York, where he worked and throve, remarks cynically:

"The justice of the underworld is in working order even if the justice of the upper world misses fire occasionally."

"LEGS" DIAMOND, bootlegger, beer runner, racketeer, shot several times, carrying at least 10 bullets in his body, was convicted more than 20 times, each time "escaping the rap."

He wriggled from the clutches of justice again on Thursday. That night he had a party to celebrate his escape from the latest "rap."

LATE IN THE night, when the party was over, there came another "rap" and that one he did not escape.

One bullet fired through his head and two into his face as he lay in bed, silenced him forever.

It was a cruel, cold-blooded murder.

Gangsters explain it briefly:

"He was a double-crosser, and what he got was too good for him."

That picture of our crime situation should interest prohibitionists, since prohibition alone makes possible Jack Diamond and the thousands like him.

SOUVENT FEMME varie, which means "Woman often changes." The most changeable young lady, in a swoon one minute, the next dancing nimbly, is no more changeable than our own Wall street stock market.

Day before yesterday it was in a dead faint, and yesterday prices went bounding upward like the wild chamois.

Sir George Paish, an important British economist, predicted on Thursday:

"The world is standing on the threshold of the greatest prosperity it has ever experienced."

And, lo and behold, the stock exchange began proving it yesterday.

HOW DELIGHTFUL to have the old year die so pleasantly, how marvelous if the New Year would bring all the good things we hope for.

It surely would, if men would forget their fears for a little while, if high finance would become businesslike and worry less about being "liquid," and if 123,000,000 Americans would realize that they have everything in the world that any nation could want, except realization of the fact that they have it.

NEWS FROM France is VERY interesting. Briand is said to plan restoration of conditions in Central Europe as far as possible as they were before the war. He would put the Hapsburgs back on the throne of Austria, thus shutting out any possibility of a combination with Germany.

The French republic, that will not permit any pretendant to the French throne to live on French soil, re-establishing an emperor in another country, restoring such a line as the Hapsburgs especially, is truly interesting. It is as though the United States should undertake to restore the empire of Mexico.

NEW YORK and New Jersey combined to build a tunnel connecting Manhattan Island with the American continent, enabling automobiles to drive under the river from New Jersey to New York. Recently, an automobile driver, paying 50 cents, received tunnel ticket No. 45,000,000.

The traffic has already paid for the tunnel, supplying money for another tunnel.

IT WOULD be a good thing for all cities and states if they would spend more of their money on improvements to increase values and MAKE MONEY, and less for the benefit of politicians.

RAILROADS, A LITTLE late, but better late than never, decide to deliver freight "at the store door," also pick it up there and take it to the railroad.

Little by little, the railroads have lost their short-haul business, turning it over to automobile freight haulers, that COULD "pick up and deliver." The railroads will get back much of what they lost if they will turn to lighter transportation units, higher passenger speed, and modern freight service.

Meanwhile, this country, for its own sake, must see that the railroads are protected, and have public support. They are the veins and arteries of the United States, not to be trifled with, or neglected.

URUGUAY SOUTH of us, is buying gasoline and kerosene from Russia, 20,000 tons of gasoline, at $16.50 a ton, kerosene at $14 a ton. Oil men will know what that means.

BOGUS DRYS RANSACK HOME

Band of Six Loot Kings' Sumer Residence; Awe Caretakers With Pistol

Armed night raiders, posing as prohibition agents, looted Silver Springs Farm, summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon King, socially prominent residents of the exclusive Fox Chapel district, early last evening and escaped with an unestimated amount of booty, county detectives were told today.

The raiders, at least six in their gang, entered the quarters of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Campbell, the caretakers, which are above the garage and about 100 yards from the home.

AWE CARETAKERS

Three of them, Campbell said, came into his living room, covered him and his wife with revolvers, and warned them to keep quiet. Then one left, joining two companions outside. A short time later, Campbell said, he heard an auto come into the driveway.

One of the men, pointing to a badge on his vest, said:

"We are prohibition agents from Greensburg."

For nearly half an hour, the caretaker and his wife sat in their little living room, facing the two grim-faced men who dangled revolvers in their hands.

Then a call sounded outside, the two men left and Campbell heard an auto being driven away.

PHONE WIRES CUT

He went to the telephone to call police and found the wires had been cut.

Going to the house, he found the marauders had broken down a cellar door to gain entrance.

Mrs. King went to the farm this morning from her town home, 5555 Forbes street, and found that some liquor, a shotgun and a flashlight had been taken. She said:

"They evidently were looking for a large supply of liquor, but only found a small quantity. I know they weren't prohibition agents.

"My husband is in Arizona and the place was closed for the winter, with no one there except the caretakers."

The home is located on Old Mill Road and is a considerable distance from its nearest neighbors.

King, a salesman for the Jones & Loughlin Steel Corporation, is the son of Willis L. King, vice president of that company.

MRS. GORDON C. KING . . . SIX ARMED MEN LOOTED HER HOME

Mrs. King, charming society figure, whose summer home on Old Mill road, Fox Chapel, was looted by a gang of six armed bandits, posing as prohibition agents. Mrs. King was at her town house in Forbes street, bandits held the caretakers at pistols' points.

WILLARD SEES RAILWAY WAGE ADJUSTMENT

Baltimore and Ohio Head Gives Hoover Assurance; To Meet Fixed Charges

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, assured President Hoover today he had every confidence that a successful conclusion would be reached in the negotiations pending between railway executives and the brotherhood over wage adjustments.

He pointed out that such adjustments will give the roads $200,000,000 next year, which, coupled with the $100,000,000 available from the Railway Credit Corporation, will give the carriers a total of $300,000,000 with which to meet their fixed charges and bond interests. Willard said:

"Such an outlet ought to be very reassuring."

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Railroad managements of the East, West and South moved today to apply the brakes to $300,000,000 paid annually in wages to their employes.

That amount represents the 15 per cent which executives decided yesterday to take from the workers' wages.

A committee of nine executives, headed by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was designated to "negotiate to a conclusion" with representatives of the Railway Labor Executives' Association their intention to reduce pay.

The meeting of the groups will be held within 30 days, when a notice of a reduction which the rail heads are expected to issue Monday will expire. Agreement before that time automatically cancels the notice. Railroad officials anticipate a friendly settlement by January 15.

The action of the rail executives was received by labor officials today with little or no surprise.

'LEGS' KILLING MYSTERY TO SHOW GIRL

Marion Roberts Goes Home To Mother, Tells of Love For Murdered Racketeer

BULLETIN.

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—District Attorney John T. Delaney left for Boston today to question Marion (Kiki) Roberts in connection with the slaying of Jack (Legs) Diamond. Police Chief David Smurl telephoned the Boston police at 2 a. m., asking that the girl be taken into custody.

BOSTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The Boston American in a copyrighted story today carries an exclusive interview in which Marion (Kiki) Roberts told of her friendship with Jack (Legs) Diamond, who was slain in Albany, N. Y., yesterday. Albany police have already expressed belief there is little hope of apprehending the Diamond killers.

Miss Roberts came to her home in this city yesterday and has kept in seclusion with her mother, Mrs. Grace Strasnick. The American quotes her as saying:

"I was in love with Jack Diamond. I was in Albany a short time before he was killed. But I don't know who killed him or anything about his murder.

'LEGS' HAPPY

"The last time I saw him was Thursday night at 11 p. m. He came to my room at Albany to tell me of his acquittal at his trial for kidnaping. He said he was very happy.

"I was in Albany awaiting the outcome of his trial, and it was understood between us that when the trial ended I was to come home to Boston and my mother.

"He was with me only about 15 minutes. I never saw him again. When he left me he said he was going to meet some newspapermen with whom he had an appointment.

"My first knowledge that he was killed was the next morning when I heard newsboys calling the extra outside my house.

'EXTRAS' BREAK NEWS

"I thought at first they were calling out that Jack Diamond was acquitted, then I heard the boys calling: 'Jack Diamond killed.' When I fully awakened to know what the words meant I fainted.

"When I came to I realized I must pull myself together. I had planned to take the 10 o'clock train to Boston, but I missed it. The reason I did not go near the police was that I knew they did not need me, for I could throw no light on what had happened.

FORGIVEN BY MOTHER

"I had just time to catch the next train. Now I am back with my mother, happy that she has forgiven me. I am sorry

SENATE TOLD OF GERMAN 'PERIL'

Banker, on Stand, Admits Company Made 13 Million Floating Foreign Loans

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The Hoover moratorium was approved today by the Senate Finance Committee.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—An American banker told the Senate Finance Committee today this country very likely would conclude it wise to make some further extension or adjustment of European debts.

He was Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of the National City Bank.

The banker expressed the opinion it would cause rebellion to force Germany to go through with her debt payments.

Asked about the possibility of Europe being able to start paying again at the end of the moratorium, he agreed with a questioner that "it would be a miracle if there was a sudden change by which Europe could resume payments."

Earlier, Mitchell had told of his company making $13,000,000 of profits in foreign bond transactions in the last 12 years.

He gave the figure in reply to a question from Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California.

A moratorium opponent, who sponsored the inquiry, Johnson announced the next witnesses would be representatives of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, Dillon Read and Company and the Chase National Bank, who will be called Monday.

Mitchell said the profit was made on issues totaling $1,071,955,000 which have been floated since 1919.

This did not include Cuban and Canadian issues.

Mitchell's testimony followed action of the House in ratifying President Hoover's one-year debt moratorium plan last night. The resolution was immediately forwarded to the Senate for action.

Passage was accomplished in the House at 10 o'clock last night after a continuous session from noon and a threat by Rep. Rainey, of Illinois, majority leader, to keep the House in session all night if necessary.

As passed, the resolution contains a proviso putting the Congress flatly on record against any revision or cancellation.

The proviso, though opposed by nine Republican members in the Ways and Means Committee, was not attacked on the floor.

During the debate the House

DOPE ROBBERS LOOT STORE

After binding William Barr, of 5517 Camelia street, with rubber hose and a sheet, two robbers early today escaped with 60 grains of morphine from the drug store of Dewitt C. Barr, 5272 Butler street.

William Barr, brother of the drug store owner, was asleep in the store. The thieves forced the front door without awakening him. After tying Barr and warning him against outcry, the men, described to police as being middle-aged, fled with the morphine.

A short time before thieves forced the front door of the Young Drug Company at 5201 Butler street, doing damage estimated at $100. Nothing was taken, a check revealed.

KIDNAPED CHILD BELIEVED SLAIN

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Kidnaped, attacked, slain and the body thrown in rapid transit tubes, was the theory that police, minus positive clues, were working on in the disappearance of pretty little blonde Marian McLean, 6 years old.

Despite a city-wide hunt for Marian's abductor, not a trace of the man, believed to be demented, or the child, had been found.

Police feared Marian had met the same fate of three other small girls kidnaped here within the last 16 years. Two of that trio never were heard of again, while the parents of the third opened the back door on June 17, 1915, two days after Elizabeth Nolte, 11, was carried away, and found a bundle containing the body of their child.

Several little girls who lived in Marian's neighborhood told police that the man who spoke to the missing child and then walked down an alley with her, had accosted them in disorderly manner recently.

Ortiz Rubio's Kin Jailed in Attack

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Eustaquio Rocha Ortiz, a nephew of President Ortiz Rubio, was committed to jail today until the penal court fixes the fine to be assessed because he attacked Alfredo Serralde Miranda during a dance at the Chapultepec Club a month ago.

Manuel Ortiz Rubio, another nephew of the President, was released for lack of evidence. The youths were arrested by order of the President, who directed the Attorney General to proceed as he would in any other case.

Parisian Confesses Killing New Yorker

PARIS, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—With the arrest and confession of Albert Davin, a Parisian insurance agent, French police announced today they had solved the mysterious murder of Richard Wall, young New Yorker, whose nude body was found floating in the Seine 40 miles from Paris yesterday.

Davin, police declared, confessed he had committed the murder for the purpose of robbery after cultivating Wall's acquaintance in a boulevard cafe.

Expect Crisis Today In Pola Negri Case

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Pola Negri, noted motion picture actress, has responded to treatment, following an operation Wednesday to remove an intestinal obstruction, but her fever continues, her physicians said today.

The actress' physicians said they expected the crisis in her condition today, and were considering the advisability of a second blood transfusion.

Penna. Naval Flier Saved by Parachute

Washington, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—The Navy has a new member of the mythical caterpillar club of fliers whose lives have been saved by parachutes.

He is Lieut. Matthias B. Gardner, of State College, Pa., whose airplane crashed 12 miles south of San Diego, Cal., yesterday.

Mother Kills Ill Daughter and Self

GLENDALE, Cal., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Because she believed her daughter, Helen, 20, would never again be well, Mrs. Rosebud Harris, 40, shot the girl to death and then ended her own life by inhaling gas at their home yesterday.

Betty Lawford Gets Marriage License

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Louis Monta Bell, motion picture director, and Betty Joan Lawford, 19, English actress, obtained a marriage license in the Municipal Building yesterday. Bell, who gave his age as 39, was divorced in Reno on December 7.

CREDIT 'POOL' UP IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Two leading financial experts were today called before the Senate Sub-Committee on Banking and Currency to give their opinions on the $500,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation proposed by President Hoover. They are Ogden L. Mills, undersecretary of the Treasury, and Mortimer N. Buckner, president of the New York Trust Company.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, Progressive Republican, of Iowa, at the first hearing, subjected Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, to a severe grilling.

Langdon's Wife Files Suit for Separation

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 19.—(INS.)—A separation suit has been instituted in the Supreme Court here against Harry Langdon, comedian of the stage and screen, it was disclosed yesterday when notice was filed that Mrs. Helen W. Langdon, the actor's wife, will ask the court for $1,000 weekly alimony and $10,000 counsel fees next Wednesday.

City Urges Delinquent Tax Payment by Installments

For probably the first time efforts are being made to encourage the payment of delinquent taxes to the city on the installment plan. The city is suggesting property owners arrange to make periodical payments.

R. W. Thompson, city treasurer, has sent notices to persons owing delinquent taxes informing them if they are not in a position to pay at once they should call at the Treasurer's office and set a date for paying an installment.

Thompson's notices said:

"The inclosed statement shows delinquent taxes owed by you which require immediate attention.

"If you are not in a position to pay these taxes at once, please call at this office and arrange for a definite date for payment in full or in part."

It is estimated the delinquent city taxes at the end of 1931 will total more than $6,000,000.

Auditors of Price, Waterhouse & Co. are still centering their efforts in completing the audit in the delinquent tax office.

Work for Needy Hastens Death of Mother of 9

Mourned by the poor and by school children, Mrs. Edward Hussey, 49, of 932 Dixon avenue, East Pittsburgh, mother of nine children, is dead in her home today, due partly to her unceasing efforts to minister to destitute families of the neighborhood.

She climbed a quarter-mile hill Friday noon to serve lunch to children of the Crestas Terrace School, North Versailles Township, part of the community welfare program. She became ill while preparing the food and returned home, dying in 15 minutes of acute indigestion and heart trouble.

A physician said her condition was aggravated by her walk up and down the hill.

Mrs. Hussey, a member of the North Versailles Parent-Teacher Association, had been active in relief work and helped organize free milk and food service for the needy. She was a member of St. Coleman's Church, Turtle Creek, and of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Her children, ranging in age from 12 to 30, are James, Thomas, Raymond, Edward, Jr., Margaret, Arthur, Alvin, Alice and Agnes.

COUNCIL RELIEVES KLINE OF MUNICIPAL GARAGE SUPERVISION

SEEKS TO CUT WASTE IN SUPPLIES

Public Works Equipment to Be Serviced at Asphalt Plant; Will Check Gas

City Council had struck another blow at Mayor Charles H. Kline's patronage power today by its action in transferring direction of the municipal garage from Kline's office to the Department of Public Safety.

The mayor and Council have been at loggerheads on a number of items in connection with the city's 1932 budget for more than a week, and the latest action was construed as another move to lessen Kline's prestige.

William Monahan, superintendent of the garage where police, fire and Public Works department automobiles are repaired, had been responsible to the Mayor only. Under the new plan, Monahan's direct superior will be Public Safety Director James M. Clark.

COSTS SLASHED

At the same time Monahan and H. S. Brenstein, city statistician, were instructed by the Budget Committee to prepare a report on how much work could be done next year with a $100,000 setup. The former appropriation was $138,000.

A percentage of the garage maintenance will be eliminated through provision of a separate setup of $29,000 for garage work at the asphalt plant. Department of Public Works vehicles will be repaired there instead of at the downtown headquarters in the old Exposition Building. Mechanics and helpers who worked on the department's cars will be transferred. Monahan will have supervision over police and fire apparatus.

CUT GAS WASTE

At the same time Council took steps to prevent waste of gasoline and oil used in city automobiles. Citing instances where automobiles which traveled only 2,000 miles per year showed gasoline consumption equal to machines chalking up as high as 50,000 miles, President John S. Herron had the Budget Committee instruct Supplies Department Director W. R. Dunlap to arrange a new system for fuel distribution.

Dunlap, called before Council, pointed out he was making such an arrangement for 1932. The new plan, it was said, will provide for issuing of gasoline books similar to taxi slips now used by city departments. Under the present plan vehicles are required to come from all parts of the city to the Municipal Garage for their fuel. Council contended this was a waste of time, fuel and tires. Another plan suggested was installation of gas stations at strategic points throughout the city for municipal cars only.

Councilmen indicated the 1932 tax millage would be set not later than Monday morning, when the budget sessions are resumed.

OFFICER HELD IN 'SHAKEDOWN'

Plainclothesman Thomas Branovich, of the Woods Run police station, was held in county jail today pending the posting of $2,500 bail in connection with an alleged attempt to "shake down" Mrs. Anne Gustis, of 1257 Ridge avenue. An information charging extortion was made before Alderman T. A. Flanigan.

Branovich was taken into custody by three county detectives late yesterday who secreted themselves in the Gustis home and saw him accept $50 in marked money, they said. The accused denied the allegations and flourished two tickets, which he said were for an unemployed benefit to be held in the Twenty-first Ward.

Mrs. Gustis complained to District Attorney Andrew T. Park 10 days ago of the alleged "shakedown." She declared Branovich wanted the money for "protecting" her following a raid sometime ago in which the accused officer was alleged to have participated.

FAKE SALESMAN GETS 3 YEARS

Declaring the case "the meanest he had ever had before him," Judge James H. Gray, in Criminal Court, pronounced a sentence of three years in the workhouse upon Francis Piper, 37, of East Stockton avenue, a World War veteran, who confessed having fraudulently obtained money in the name of disabled veterans.

Piper pleaded guilty to false pretense and admitted he had represented himself to be a salesman for a store he said the disabled veterans were running. He took orders for vegetables and groceries, collecting from $2 to $5 from about 40 persons.

Edward Flaherty, chief court deputy sheriff, recognized Piper as he led him from jail to the courtroom, and admitted he had been victimized into giving the spurious salesman $5 for an order.

Jobless Marchers Arrested in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Police arrested a few unemployed demonstrators who were marching on the house of deputies yesterday to present a petition for relief.

MAN INJURED, AUTOIST FLEES

M. P. Coyne, 43, of 134 Robinson street, was in Montefiore Hospital today in a serious condition, while police sought the driver of an automobile.

Howard J. Johnson, Jr., 11, of 633 Chislett street, ran into the path of the machine yesterday and was killed, according to East End police. The driver, Joseph M. Ennis, of 1629 Jancey street, took the boy to Pittsburgh Hospital, where he was pronounced dead, and then surrendered to police.

Police today sought the owner of a red roadster which ran across the sidewalk at Radcliffe and Stadium streets, Esplen, last night and fell over a 50-foot embankment onto the Pennsylvania railroad tracks. The driver, uninjured, disappeared when witnesses reached the car.

Christmas Vacation For State Employes

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has advised all state departments that the Capitol will be closed from next Thursday noon to Monday, December 28, giving state employes a two-day Christmas vacation.

Food Cost Shows Down Trend Here

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The cost of food has resumed its downward slide in Pennsylvania once more.

After a slight turn upward for several months, the retail prices of food declined 2 per cent in the month ending November 15 in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton. Those municipalities were among 49 of the 51 principal centers of population in the country to experience a reduction in the month.

Fumes Routing Many Not Due to Ammonia

An investigation today by police and fire officials disclosed that it was not ammonia as first reported but fumes from another refrigerant which on Wednesday drove 20 families from the Hobart apartments, 5703 Hobart street. A woman and a girl were carried to safety from the second floor.

Drinks Ammonia, Fails to End Life

Peter Dinert, 28, of 2608 Mission street, who police say, drank a half-pint of household ammonia in an attempt to end his life, continued to improve in South Side Hospital today. Dinert told police he was despondent over money matters.

JAPANESE ARMY CAPTURES 2 TOWNS

Troops Renew Drive With Purpose of Controlling Entire Chinchow Area

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service.

MUKDEN, Dec. 19.—The Japanese invasion west into Manchuria began in earnest today as Col. Mori, acting on orders from Tokio, occupied the towns of Changtu and Pamiencheng, and then continued on westward.

The towns were taken without opposition from the Chinese forces which had controlled them. The drive toward Chinchow, ostensibly to suppress Chinese "bandits," assumed major proportions as the Japanese troops indicated they intended to take control of the whole Chinchow area.

Japan Again Demands Manchurian Truce

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Dec. 19.—The contemplated Japanese military attack upon the Chinese forces in the Chinchow area will begin immediately, it was learned authoritatively by International News Service today, unless the Chinese forces retire forthwith.

The Tokio war office has ordered Gen. Shigeru Honjo to dispatch a messenger to Chinchow with an ultimatum to the Chinese commander there demanding withdrawal of his troops south of the Great Wall within one week.

Simultaneously the Japanese minister at Peiping is to send a similar ultimatum to Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, in charge of Chinese operations throughout Southern Manchuria.

TIME LIMIT SET

The week's time given the Chinese to evacuate is to begin with arrival of the messenger at Chinchow, probably on Monday.

It was understood a reply to both ultimatums would be demanded within 24 hours. A deliberate refusal to comply probably would mean an immediate clash.

It was reported Chiang Hsueh-Liang had been informally told of the move and had taken immediate steps. It was understood he was returning to Nanking, capital of the new government, immediately.

AIDES SLAY GENERAL

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19.—(INS.)—Gen. Peng Chi Piao, chief of staff of Chinese military headquarters at Kaifeng, capital of the province of Honan, was bodily murdered by two of his men. The slayers were regimental commanders who had invited the General to one of their homes for dinner.

In the middle of the meal both of the lesser officers drew guns and fired at the General, killing him instantly.

2 Held in Holdup, $1,700 Loot Found

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 19.—Police last night recovered $1,700 of the $2,500 which was stolen in the holdup of a chain store paymaster when they arrested John Toth, 26, and William Buck, 25, both of Johnstown. Toth, police said, formerly worked for the stores company here. Buck, who had been serving as a cook at the Salvation Army headquarters here, was taken into custody at the "Army's" establishment.

Widow Given Dope, Phila. Doctor Held

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Dr. Louis Barenbaum, 50, a physician accused of supplying narcotics to a young widow who spent her husband's $10,000 estate for drugs, was held under $1,000 bail yesterday. Police said he was arrested after taking marked money.

'PEACHES' MAY FILE APPEAL

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Mrs. Frances Heenan (Peaches) Browning failed yesterday to obtain a divorce from Edward West (Daddy) Browning, but there was every indication their widely publicated legal battles were far from finished.

Supreme Court Justice John L. Walsh denied the divorce petition from the bench before opposing lawyers had made their arguments. He held the plaintiff had failed to establish the charge of misconduct, the only ground on which New York state grants a divorce.

Mrs. Browning's friends said she was "greatly mystified" at the decision and probably would appeal, although her counsel, Judge Daniel F. Cohalan, refused to comment. Browning likewise was silent.

30 Bodies Recovered In Algerian Flood

TUNIS, Algeria, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Thirty bodies have been recovered in the flooded districts near here and the work of restoration continued today. A heavy fall of snow added to the difficulties of the workers.

BOLAND SEEKS DRY REPEAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Another Volstead Act repealer was offered by a Pennsylvania member of Congress yesterday. Representative Boland (Dem.), of Scranton, introduced a bill in the House to strike from the statute books the prohibition law and all its amendments.

Boland previously had offered an amendment to the act to prohibit the prescribing of beer and other malt beverages by physicians as a medicine.

House anti-dry Democrats yesterday resisted the effort of a Republican group to draw party lines on the issue. Instead of establishing a separate organization, as the Republicans had done, three score Democrats voted to continue the old non-partisan anti-dry bloc and re-elected Representative Linthicum, of Maryland, as chairman.

Army Flier Glides 21 Hours for Record

HONOLULU, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—New world records for distance and endurance for gliders were claimed yesterday for Lieut. William A. Cocke, United States Army, who landed after flying 21 hours 36 minutes.

He far exceeded the previous record made by Ferdinand Schulz, who in gliding 14 hours 7 minutes traveled 283.22 miles. Cocke exceeded this mileage. His flight was made in national glider meet competition.

Helene Costello Property Pact Seen

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Attorneys for Mrs. Helene Costello Sherman said today she and her husband, Lowell Sherman, actor and director, had reached a property settlement in their pending divorce case.

Sherman sued for divorce, charging his wife called him a "fat old man" and a "ham actor." She is the daughter of Maurice Costello, pioneer screen actor.

MITCHELL SEES GERMAN DEBT REBELLION

Country Will Revolt if Forced to Pay, Banker Tells Senate Inquiry

cheered a declaration by Rep. Crisp that it is serving notice upon the world that the United States does not intend to revise the generous American war debt settlements.

Tension gripped the House as Representative McFadden (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, cast into the dramatic debate an explosive assertion that he was ready to back up his charges that President Hoover had "sold out" to Germany. Previously he had demanded that his Republican critics investigate the truth of his charges.

The Pennsylvanian spoke amid scattered applause. He had waited through nearly six hours of fiery discussion which heard the debt holiday proposal berated and defended.

REFERS TO SPEECH

Referring to his speech of Tuesday, for which he has been deprived of his patronage privileges, snubbed by the White House and rebuked and repudiated by his state and party colleagues, he said:

"If the House shall desire to consider this matter, I hold myself in readiness to give such additional information as I may have."

McFadden spoke before crowded galleries and a floor attendance of the membership unequaled since the opening day of Congress. A hum of whispered conversation that had grown as the debate continued was stilled. All listened intently.

McFadden said:

"I observe by articles appearing in the public press of yesterday afternoon and this morning, published quite generally in the newspapers throughout the country, that I have been singled out as a victim of punitive measures to be administered to me by my Republican colleagues of Pennsylvania, in the House and Senate.

"I have serious objection to being tried in this ex parte manner and having an ex parte judgment rendered against me by this self-constituted board of inquiry concerning utterances made by me on the floor of this House. Whatever I said on the floor of the House upon any subject, I said in the performance of what I conceive to be my full duty in giving to the members of the House such information as I had concerning matters then pending before the House, in order that they might have the same opportunity of considering and weighing the evidence that I had before voting upon such matters.

EVIDENTIAL VALUE

"I submitted documents and was prepared to submit further documents were I permitted, but unfortunately, on account of the insistence of the time restrictions I could not submit the other documents, all of which were of evidential value in determining the weight to be accredited to any remarks I was then making.

"I was appearing in the performance of my official duty, as it is the duty of every member in this House to give such information as he has acquired to the House on any matter pending before the House and that he believes will be to the best interests of his constituents and his country.

"The truth of the allegations made by me in the speech that I made on the floor of this House seems to be the subject of inquiry of this cabal of my state associates in the Congress of the United States. If, in the wisdom of this House, they desire to further consider this matter, I shall hold myself in readiness to furnish such additional information as I may have to offer, supplementary thereto, and all referred to therein."

LETTERS OFFERED

McFadden had placed in the Congressional Record two letters as evidence that international bankers have long been working for cancellation of war debts. They were the letter from Jules S. Bache, New York banker, to William Randolph Hearst, of October 21, 1930, and Mr. Hearst's reply of November 6 that year.

In his reply, Mr. Hearst told Mr. Bache that he could not advocate the plan of cancelling any more of the Allied debts.

Representative McFadden, in offering the letters for the Congressional Record, declared that the overtures of Mr. Bache revealed the attitude of the international bankers for cancellation of the war debts, months before the Hoover moratorium was proposed.

Steel Man's Sister Charges Larceny of $500,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Disclosing that within the last year she had lost $500,000 in unfortunate stock deals, Miss Katherine K. Beeson, sister of Charles K. Beeson, vice president of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, yesterday preferred grand larceny charges against Peter R. Visconti, 41, a former pugilist.

Of the half million Miss Beeson said she lost, she charged that Visconti obtained $17,000 in cash and bonds in exchange for railway shares alleged to be virtually worthless; that he had unidentified confederates also obtained Pittsburgh Steel stock worth $55,000 and bonds worth $98,000, and that she holds $100,000 in stock of a theatrical jewelry concern in which Visconti was alleged to have been active and which is now being investigated by the Attorney General's office.

In addition to these items, she told the Attorney General's office that on December 8, 1930, she gave $177,000 to an unapprehended group who promised to make a half million for her in the stock market.

Visconti, also said to be known as Peter Visco, was arrested by the Attorney General's staff. It was announced from that office that he recently pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny in the second degree and is out on bail awaiting sentence.

Miss Beeson now is living in a New York hotel.

Commissioners Find Law Bans December Pay Cut

County Commissioners played an involuntary Santa Claus to the employes directly under them yesterday when they withdrew a pending proposal to cut one-fourth of December's pay from all workers except janitors and scrubwomen.

Assistant County Solicitor Charles G. Lane, Jr., told the Commissioners at a meeting yesterday that the proposed "cut" was an evasion of the law and that the employes could recover. Lane said the only agencies that could alter employes' pay were the Legislature and the County Salary Board.

The proposal to "short-pay" the County Commissioners' employes was made last week by Commissioner Edward V. Babcock during C. C. McGovern's absence, in an effort to conserve the county's resources. McGovern learned upon his return that employes in other county offices had been paid in full.

The Commissioners' payroll includes about 2,000 persons and the proposed cut would have totaled $24,000.

'HANG WOMAN'S KIDNAPERS,' CRY OF SLEUTHS ON HUNT

UNCANNY LUCK, LENZ SAYS AS FOES GAIN

Culbertson Admits Card Superiority But Holds Better Bidding a Factor

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Ely Culbertson's contract bridge team will begin Christmas week 7,915 points ahead of Sidney S. Lenz and Oswald Jacoby, having gained 12,755 points in a week.

Lenz and Jacoby won only three of nine rubbers played in the ninth session, which started last night and ended early today. Culbertson's side gained 2,950 points.

An "uncanny" streak of cards was given by Lenz as the reason for the great weekend deficit. He predicted a break in his favor sooner or later. Culbertson admitted a superiority in cards but regarded greater precision of bidding on part scores as a great factor in his lead.

Lenz penned a short note to assure everybody that he and Jacoby were in perfect harmony.

Proof of System Seen By Mrs. Culbertson

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

World's Greatest Woman Bridge Player. (Written especially for International News Service.)

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 19. — When the ninth rubber of the ninth session, and the sixty-third rubber of the match between my husband and Sidney S. Lenz, to test the respective merits of the approach-forcing system of contract bidding in contrast with the "official" system, had ended last night, the number of aces held by the respective sides was all even at 744 each.

Ely and his partner, Mr. Lightner, had held 16 more kings than had Mr. Lenz and Mr. Oswald Jacoby, his partner. However, we were 7,915 points ahead in the score and had won 34 rubbers as against 29 rubbers by our opponents.

'SYSTEM PROVED'

While aces and kings are not necessarily decisive measuring sticks of the value of the cards held, all other things being equal they do paint a reasonably accurate picture of the strength of the hands, provided the number of hands is great enough to eliminate the question of freak holdings. This being true, a lead of nearly 8,000 points would indicate that the approach-forcing system of bidding is proving its case.

The third hand of the sixteenth rubber was a beautiful example of approach bidding, even though the final declaration was a sacrifice bid, in order to prevent an adverse game. It so splendidly illustrates the system that I give it below:

East—Dealer.

NORTH (Mr. Lenz)
Spades—J-10-9-7-6.
Hearts—A-10.
Diamonds—K-4.
Clubs—A-K-10-7.

WEST (Mr. Culbertson)	EAST (Mr. Lightner)
Spades—K-Q-5-4-3.	Spades—A-8-2.
Hearts—K-J-7-4.	Hearts—Q-8-6-5.
Diamonds—A-Q-J-4.	Diamonds—10-8-3.
Clubs—None.	Clubs—8-6-2.

SOUTH (Mr. Jacoby)
Spades—None.
Hearts—3-2.
Diamonds—9-6-5-2.
Clubs—Q-J-9-5-4-3.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 N. T.	3 clubs	3 hearts	5 clubs
6 hearts	7 clubs	7 hearts	Pass
Pass	Pass	Pass	Double

BIDDING LAUDED

The bidding between the East and West partners has so accurately portrayed the hands that, coupled with the information disclosed by the adverse bidding, it was apparent to my husband, who held what appeared to be a very strong hand, that game in clubs could not be prevented and that a sacrifice bid was essential. The paltry set of 2 tricks doubled was richly compensated later when the rubber was won.

Ex-Senator Joins Defense of Allen

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Fletcher W. Stites, of Narberth, former state senator, has been retained to assist John R. K. Scott in defending Edwin Allen at his forthcoming murder trial, it was disclosed when Stites visited Allen in his cell.

Stites was accompanied to the jail by Miss Rose Allen, the prisoner's sister. Allen is accused of shooting Francis A. Donaldson, III, in a quarrel over Donaldson's affair with Miss Allen.

Cleared as Killer, Hired as Town Guard

MISS JEAN DARLING, 8 — PILOT ROBERT S. LeROI

PILOT LeROI AND HIS DISTINGUISHED PASSENGER AT BETTIS

Baby Star, Indian Princess, 'Whoops It Up' Here On Way to See Hoover

"Mama, do I have to entertain the natives?"

Jean Darling, precocious 8-year-old movie star, Indian princess, deputy sheriff and police chief, waited for a reply to her question yesterday before disembarking from a Transcontinental and Western Air Passenger liner at Bettis airport yesterday.

With her mother, she is en route to New York and Washington where she will present a petition to President Hoover on behalf of the Sioux Indians of South Dakota, who last year suffered serious losses to their crops through the grasshopper scourge and who face severe privation this winter if help is not forthcoming.

Mama—Mrs. Dorothy Hamilton Darling—looking as worried as almost any other mother of an eight-year-old, replied:

"No dear—only the newspaper men."

And then the fun began.

As Princess Winon Waste of the South Dakota plains, she danced, war-whooped and scampered all over the place. Between whoops and scampers she breathlessly confided that Mrs. Calvin Coolidge was an honorary member of her tribe.

By and by her interviewer got in a question.

"What are you going to tell the President?"

To which she found time to reply before scampering off to the plane:

"Well—I'm going to tell him what a swell job he has and I'll shake hands and maybe I'll kiss him—oh, lots of things . . . ."

Walton Cleared In Oil Fraud Case

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—J. C. Walton, ousted Governor of Oklahoma, and two other men were freed yesterday of mail fraud charges in connection with operation of the Universal Oil and Gas Company by Edgar S. Vaught, Federal District Judge, who sustained demurrers as to Walton, Frank M. Ephland, salesman, and William F. Collins, counsel for the Universal.

Motions to dismiss similar charges against S. E. J. Cox, former federal prisoner and promoter, his wife and seven other defendants were overruled.

GOV. CONLEY KIN FOUND SHOT

KINGWOOD, W. Va., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—With three bullet wounds in his head, Charles A. Conley, 53, nephew of Gov. W. G. Conley, was found in his home yesterday.

A guard was maintained over Conley at his home last night. His condition, a doctor said, was undetermined, although it was believed his injuries were only scalp wounds.

Members of the family declined to make a statement.

Conley was found on the kitchen floor by his wife when she returned from a visit to a neighbor's house. A revolver was discovered outside the kitchen door.

Spaniards Plan Long Flight Over Sahara

MADRID, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Capt. Cipriano Rodriguez and Lieut. Carlos Haya have announced they would take off, December 22, on a non-stop flight to Bata, Spanish Guinea, just above the equator.

They said they expected to make the 3,000-mile flight, which will take them across the Sahara desert, in from 24 to 28 hours.

ESTELLE DROPS OWN DIVORCE

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Estelle Taylor has instructed her attorney to withdraw her divorce petition in Los Angeles courts and has agreed not to contest the validity of a decree granted Jack Dempsey in Reno, Nev.

Miss Taylor said today she and her former husband had reached an agreement whereby she was to receive $35,000 to $40,000, thereby ending the divorce and property settlement battle. She added:

"I decided it better for us both not to fight this thing through and have a lot of things aired in court. I wish Mr. Dempsey all the luck and happiness in the world."

Dempsey, it was said, will pay off a mortgage and back taxes on the home of Miss Taylor, pay her attorney's fees and expenses incident to the divorce proceedings, pay an accumulation of household bills and deliver possession of two automobiles, to which she will have clear title.

RENO WAGERS ON RESULT OF ANDRE TRIAL

Gambling Houses, Divorce Colony Await Dentist's Fate; State Near Close

By MILLER HOLLAND
International News Service.

RENO, Nev., Dec. 19.—Excitement over the Andre murder trial, with its background of an eastern romance that ended fatally near a western "dude ranch," was at such pitch today that Reno's famous "gamblers' row" was betting on the outcome.

In the town's score or more of legalized gambling places, "big shots" placed their bets on whether conviction or acquittal would be the fate of Dr. Carl Pierre Andre, handsome young dentist charged with the murder of his discarded sweetheart, Mrs. Martha Hutchinson, 22-year-old widow who followed him from West Virginia.

DIVORCE COLONY JOINS

Members of the divorce colony also were catching the fever and backing their talk with silver and greenbacks.

The usual crowd of fashionable divorcees, co-eds, high school boys and girls, cowboys and others packed Judge Thomas F. Moran's courtroom.

The prosecution was expected to close its case today. Defense Counsel Harlan Heward and Pierre Garven announced they would immediately ask for an instructed verdict of acquittal, not only on technical grounds, but on the ground that "not a shred of evidence has been produced to show that Mrs. Hutchinson's death was due to anything else than an accidental fall out of Dr. Andre's automobile."

DECLARED INTEREST WANED

The state's case neared its close with a declaration by Sheriff Russell Trathen that Andre had said he was no longer interested in Mrs. Hutchinson at the time of her death. The Sheriff said:

"Dr. Andre told me Mrs. Hutchinson had come to Reno about three weeks before her death and that as soon as he received his divorce they were going to get married.

"He said also, however, that he had become disinterested in her and that he and she hadn't been going out together very often."

The Sheriff said he had questioned Andre twice following Mrs. Hutchinson's death and the doctor had repeated several times that he was driving between 50 and 60 miles an hour when Mrs. Hutchinson was killed, the evening of September 13. The Sheriff declared:

"Andre told me he struck some loose gravel and skidded, and Mrs. Hutchinson either jumped or fell from the machine."

Two Indians Shot In Fairground Fight

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—A gun fight, in which war cries mingled with other shouts, was fought by groups of white men and Cherokee Indians at the fair grounds yesterday. Two Indians were wounded, and an aged squaw was badly cut when she fell on a stone.

Fairmont police said they had evidence the white men had hidden a quantity of liquor at the fair grounds, and when it disappeared they accused the Indians of stealing it. Seven men are held for investigation.

AUTHOR-THIEF, CONSIDINE, WAITS FATE

Notorious Criminal Calmly Faces Another Sentence For 68 Burglaries Here

Robert Considine, international criminal and author of detective stories, who has spent 24 of his 50 years in prison, and who was pardoned from a life sentence through the intervention of Lady Astor in London, is today awaiting sentence by Judge James H. Gray, in Criminal Court, after pleading guilty to 68 burglaries and charges of entering buildings, larceny, assault and carrying concealed weapons in a total of 113 indictments.

Two members of Considine's gang pleaded guilty with him. They are Ray Miller, 29, formerly of Duluth, who said he learned more about crime while confined a year in prison at Jeffersonville, Ind., than he could have learned if he had been associated with Considine all his life; and Philip Moran, 21, recently a law student in Detroit, who said hunger caused him to join the Considine band.

Judge Gray asked Considine to tell him his story. He answered:

"I was thrown into prison for life in London for shooting through the foot a convict who had escaped from Devils Island. While there I saw murderers come to prison and leave. After 13 years Secretary of State Lansing petitioned for my release, but nothing came of it. Two years later Lady Astor pleaded for me and I was set free. Before that, when I was 18, I was in prison for three years in Cape Town, South Africa, for burglary. Then I served six years for a similar charge in California, being released in 1925.

"Since then I had gone straight. I wrote detective stories and books, and have had 14 published. Here is a letter from the editor of a detective story magazine vouching for the truth of this. My writing netted me $1,400.

"Lately it had been long between checks and hunger drove me back to a life of crime. I can take any honest officer from this courtroom and let him and myself go without food for three days, and I can say to him, 'Let us steal,' and he will steal.

"I hate prison but I have the heart to take it. I knew by the law of averages that I probably would be caught, and when I went on jobs I took the attitude that I would be responsible. I carried a gun, but did not use it. A gun is dangerous in the hands of a nervous person, but not in the hands of a cool head. I took the firing pin out of Moran's gun unknown to him."

J. J. Kassouf Held On Editor's Charge

Charged with assault and battery John J. Kassouf, 35, secretary of the North Side Chamber of Commerce, was held for court in $500 bond last night by Justice of the Peace Arthur Davis, of Emsworth. The charges were preferred by J. G. Shaw, 54, managing editor of the North Side Ledger, who said Kassouf had attacked him in his newspaper office.

Shaw's criticism of the North Side Chamber of Commerce, provoked the attack he said. Kassouf was discharged after a police court hearing.

PROTEST MADE BY GARAGE MEN

Charging apparent unfairness in appointment methods for official automobile inspection stations for the compulsory tests beginning in January, independent garage and service station owners today were citing rulings issued by the State Bureau of Motor Vehicles in refusing some certificates.

Many of the larger garages, some holding official certificates expiring January 1, were among those rejected, it was revealed at a meeting of the Greater Pittsburgh Garage Owners Association. The owners propose to communicate with their legislators, demanding to know what requirements are necessary.

One rejection cited pertained to the NusKay Garage, 6117-19 Broad street, East End. Though adjudged capable of continuing its automobile servicing contract by the State Department of Property and Supplies, it has been rejected as an inspection station. John D. Nuskay said his rejection cited insufficient space and unsatisfactory testing equipment. He declared his garage had 18,000 square feet and that it is authorized service agent for three automobile factories.

DEATH FOR GANG DEMANDED IN KANSAS CITY

Ex-Senator Reed Spurs War On Menace as Victim Recovers From Ordeal

International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 19.—"Get the kidnapers. Hang them."

This was the battle cry of every law officer in Kansas City today as they renewed and widened their hunt for the desperate gang which released Mrs. Nell Quinlan Donnelly, wealthy kitchen garment manufacturess, after holding her and her Negro chauffeur in captivity for 34 hours.

The search for the abductors, who had demanded $75,000 ransom on penalty of blinding Mrs. Donnelly with acid and killing her driver, George Blair, was organized in response to a mounting public clamor demanding the extermination of the kidnaping menace.

Mrs. Donnelly's abduction was but the latest episode in a long series of similar incidents apparently resulting from the operations of a highly organized gang whose specialty is the seizure for ransom of Kansas City's wealthy residents.

REED URGES HANGING

Even though the kidnapers released Mrs. Donnelly and her chauffeur without collecting the ransom or carrying out their threats of injury and death, public indignation against them and against all those who practice abduction was at a high pitch.

This feeling was crystallized in the words of former Senator James A. Reed, who, as a neighbor and counsel of the Donnellys, led the negotiations preceding the wealthy woman's release. Reed said:

"I would like to crown this kidnaping with a good hanging."

Paul F. Donnelly, war veteran and husband of the garment-making millionairess, concurred with the ex-Senator and joined him in co-operating with police in their efforts to apprehend the kidnapers.

VICTIM RECOVERING

Mrs. Donnelly, recuperating in her home from the effects of her ordeal, was unable to supply definite information. She said she was blindfolded throughout the hours of her captivity, except for one fleeting moment when she caught a hasty look at one of her captors.

This man, she declared, appeared to be a foreigner. From the conversation between the kidnapers, Mrs. Donnelly said, she implied that the gang numbered five or six members and most of them appeared to be from outside the city.

Mrs. Donnelly was unharmed, except for a small cut on her lip, inflicted when one of the kidnapers slapped his hand on her mouth to prevent her from screaming while she struggled to free herself.

'LEGS' KILLERS MAY GO FREE

I did not listen to her advice.

"The first thing for me to do is to clear myself of the indictment at Albany."

Marion is under indictment in connection with the same case on which Diamond was tried in Troy and her trial is scheduled for next month.

"There is no reason why I should not be freed as I am not guil' of any crime.

"My sole idea will be to work hard and make good for mother's sake. I have given her many heartaches during the past two years and now I am going to try and make up for what I did."

Men Who Killed 'Legs' May Not Be Found

ALBANY, Dec. 19.—Hope was abandoned by police today of capturing the two youthful gangsters who shot Jack (Legs) Diamond to death yesterday as he lay in a drunken stupor sprawled across his bed in a dingy rooming house.

Officially, the authorities bent every effort to bring Diamond's slayers to justice, but privately they said they would not lose any sleep if the killers never were caught.

Police were convinced the same mob which twice before had attempted to put Diamond on the spot was responsible for "rubbing out" the racketeering beer baron a half-hour after he left the arms of his red haired showgirl sweetheart, Marion (Kiki) Roberts, in another rooming house on the opposite side of the city.

Somewhere in New York City today, police believe, the men who clipped Diamond are hiding and getting a "big kick" out of all the stir caused by the shooting. New York City authorities told Albany police they will co-operate to the limit in an effort to track down Diamond's slayers, but haven't given any encouragement the murder will be solved.

BODY REMOVED

Diamond's body left Albany this morning. It was to be taken to Maspeth on Long Island, the home of Mrs. Diamond.

The funeral probably will be held from Maspeth.

North Side Church Plans Centenary Festival

The congregation of Christ Church of Allegheny is preparing to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the church on Christmas Day.

Christ Church of Allegheny is the oldest Episcopal Congregation, with the exception of Trinity Church of Greater Pittsburgh.

The first service in the parish was conducted on Christmas Day in 1831. The first rector was the Rev. Sanson K. Brunot of a family distinguished in the early annals of the city.

The building now occupied by the congregation on Union avenue was constructed in 1840. D. B. Oliver was senior warden for 32 years. Other supporters are Harvey and Wilson Miller, Erwin S. Craig, E. T. Whiter, Thomas C. Jenkins, Ormsby Phillips and his family and Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Henry.

F. Orr Johnson, the present rector, has been in charge of Christ Church since 1912.

The centenary services will begin on Christmas Day at 8 a. m. and 10 a. m. On Sunday, December 27, there will be an historical address by Mr. Johnson in the morning and the Right Rev. James T. Mann, bishop of Pittsburgh, will officiate at eventide service.

On Monday evening, December 28, there will be a Christmas festival for the children; on Tuesday evening, December 29, a community evening with an exhibition of historic objects. The celebration will close December 30 with a reception.

Anticipates Crush, Asks Members Stay Away From Service

Members of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Shady avenue and Walnut street, will be asked tomorrow by the Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Coakley not to attend the midnight mass on Christmas, because of the enormous crowds.

All of the Christmas music and ceremonial will be repeated at 11 a. m. Christmas Day. Father Coakley has announced, for the benefit of those who fear the crush that usually attends the midnight function. After the midnight mass and after the 11 o'clock mass Christmas Day the choristers will present a program of Christmas carols.

Pastor to Speak On 'The Risen Life'

"The Risen Life of the Believer" will be the morning subject of the Rev. K. L. Cramer, of the First Baptist Church, Sharpsburg. At the evening service the subject will be "Personal Salvation."

JINGLE LAUDS GROCERS GIFTS

Many of the readers of the Sun-Telegraph who pondered over Christmas Jingle No. 31 which extolled the benevolence of a "grocer named Wright" placed him eventually in the same "plight" of the very people he was helping. Mrs. W. H. Williams, 315 Suncrest avenue, Pittsburgh, had the finishing line that the judges liked best and they gave her the Sun-Telegraph check for $5. She completed the jingle as follows:

A neighborhood grocer named Wright
Was moved by each poverty sight;
He would help out the poor
Without credit secure
What a blessing when money was tight.

PRICE SLASHING 'WARS' SCORED

The recovery of business can be speeded by courage, optimism and better competitive measures, William L. Monro, president of the American Window Glass Company, declared in an address before the wholesalers' council of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

He assailed commercial organizations which, for the sake of getting business, demoralize trade by slashing prices below fair levels and cost of production, and declared this was a contributing factor in holding back improvement. As a cure, he suggested cooperation between firms in order to maintain a fair competitive price level.

Referring to the wholesale trade Monro emphasized there was a need for this phase of business, but he told wholesalers that they must keep abreast of the times, co-operate with each other to maintain a fair price level, and keep their stock up or lose trade. W. P. Benson, chairman of the chamber's wholesale council, presided.

Pneumonia Victim, Alone for Day, Dies

John Cavanaugh, 75, of 120 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, pool room proprietor, died in the Ohio Valley Hospital at McKees Rocks shortly after he was admitted last night from lobar pneumonia.

According to a hospital report, the aged man had lain in a room in the rear of his pool room for more than 24 hours without medical attention before he was found.

Beaver Boroughs Sponsor Rate Board

MIDLAND, Pa., Dec. 19.—Beaver County Federation of Boroughs will sponsor a fair-rate board, similar to that formed in Tarentum. Each council will be asked to name a member of the board. The board will study telephone, gas, electric light and water rates with a view to securing reductions.

Verona Mother Hunts Missing Son

Another appeal was made to Missing Persons Bureau operatives today by Mrs. Olive Snair, of 831 Second street, Verona, to help her find her son, William, 14, who has been missing for three months. The boy was described by his mother as being 5 feet tall, weighing 120 pounds, and having light hair and blue eyes.

$10,000 Added to Cost Of Novelist's Home

SALINAS, Cal., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The Gouverneur Morris home on Monterey Peninsula will cost the novelist approximately $10,000 more than he had planned on paying, the Superior Court has ruled here.

S. H. and W. E. Hooke, Monterey contractors, sued the novelist for additional charges on his new home, on which he already had paid $24,000. The contractors maintained changes and alterations in the original plans for the house ordered by Morris added to the cost.

SENATE BACKS GEN. DARRAH

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Thomas W. Darrah to be a brigadier general after the Military Affairs Committee overrode a protest by Representative Wyant (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and favorably reported it.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the chief of staff, defended Darrah's record before the committee.

The committee had before it a letter from Wyant objecting to Darrah and stating he had been removed from command of a Pennsylvania brigade of infantry in France in October, 1918.

Wyant inclosed what he said was a copy of a letter written by Maj. Gen. Charles H. Muir, then commanding the 28th Division, to Gen. Pershing, in which Muir said he found Darrah "not fit to command a brigade in battle."

Tokio Premier Has Yule Beer and Fish Aplenty

TOKIO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Premier Inukai has received so many gifts since he took office that he looks forward to the Japanese equivalent of a merry Christmas.

They include 80 baskets of fresh fish, 46 boxes of dried fish, 33 baskets of fruit, 18 cases of beer, 15 cases of wine, 43 cases of sake, 8 sets of silverware and scores of boxes of rice cakes.

Food and drink are served to all those who call on him, and he has appealed to his followers to aid him in disposing of the remainder.

Ex-Official Dies In Bedford County

BEDFORD, Pa., Dec. 19.—Howard E. Blackburn, 71, former Prothonotary and Clerk of Courts of Bedford County, and at one time a representative in the General Assembly, died suddenly yesterday of uremic poisoning.

CONTRACTOR'S PROTEST HEARD

J. J. Darnley, wrecking contractor, complained to County Commissioners yesterday that he failed to get a contract from the Department of Public Works to tear down two small bridges after offering to do the work for nothing.

V. R. Covell, engineer of the County Bridge Bureau, said the contract required removal of the Montour and Deer Creek Bridge and the placing of the Montour Bridge on the Deer Creek site. He said the work was given to a contractor who was an erector as well as a wrecker.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern asked if the work was given the lowest bidder. Covell replied it was given to a contractor who was paid $75 each for removing the bridges and who later rebated the county $800 for the salvage. McGovern indicated the incident was closed.

Deputies Vote Faith In Premier Laval

PARIS, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Premier Pierre Laval won a vote of confidence from the Chamber of Deputies last night after his government had been defeated on a technical detail in connection with France's policy toward the unemployed.

A Socialist motion which would have increased aid to the jobless was made a question of confidence by the premier, and the chamber upheld him, 316 to 257.

Tattooed Man Must Serve 1888 Sentence

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—(AP.)—Martin J. McMahon's tattooed woman today sent him back to prison to serve a 35-year sentence for murder imposed in 1888. Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher ruled that the figure tattooed on McMahon's arm definitely identified him as Michael Lynch, who was sentenced 43 years ago for the slaying of a policeman, but escaped two years later. He has just served eight years in Joliet for assault.

"You needn't tell me —I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

Smoke a FRESH cigarette

CAMELS are never parched, never toasted

IF YOU want to know what freshness means to the smoker — if you want to realize in full the delights of fine tobaccos in prime smoking condition — just try Camels.

There's a difference there you can't miss—a difference that explains more eloquently than words the nation-wide switch to Camels.

Fine cigarettes kept fine — that's the story — fine cigarettes made fresh, of choicest Turkish and mild, sun-ripened Domestic tobaccos, the best that money can buy.

These fine tobaccos are fresh with natural moisture and natural flavors—they are never parched or toasted — the Reynolds method of scientifically applying heat guarantees against that.

Made fresh, Camels are kept fresh for you in the Camel Humidor Pack. No matter where or when you buy them you are sure of mild, cool, throat-friendly smoke pleasure.

We repeat, if you want a new smoke-thrill just try fresh Camels. Switch over for just one day — then leave them — if you can.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Debuts out-of-town attract Pittsburgh girls from time to time. This week-end Laura Oliver, sub-deb daughter of the George S. Olivers, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Rufus Cole, of Park avenue, and Cohomong Wood, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

And last night she attended the debut of the Coles' daughter, Elizabeth Anne Cole, who presented her at a dinner-dance in the roof garden of the Waldorf-Astoria.

Palms, ferns and pink lilies together with the debutante's gift bouquets, decorated the garden. The debutante wore white satin. In the spring she was graduated from Westover School, where she was a schoolmate of Laura. Laura will join her parents in Colborne, Canada, for Christmas.

S. Murray Rust Jr., who attends Lehigh, and his sister, Mary Lee Rust, who's a student at the Northampton School for Girls, will arrive next week to spend the holidays with their parents, the S. Murray Rusts.

To Return Home

Their cousin, William F. Rust Jr., will be home today from the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va. E. B. Tucker Jr., Morewood avenue, will be home from the University of Virginia.

Returning from Haverford College, Haverford, Pa., are Clifton Bockstoce, Bud Trimble, James Stanton III and Bradley Watkins.

Wellesley seniors returning for the holidays are Constance Newbury, daughter of the F. D. Newburys, of Briar Cliff road; Betty Porter, daughter of the Roy Porters, of Crafton; and Priscilla Goodale, daughter of the Stephen L. Goodales, of Murrayhill avenue.

Lucile Flaccus, daughter of the E. W. Flaccuses of Ben Avon, who is home from Wellesley for the holidays, will be entertained some time during the Christmas season by Sallie Marsh, a student at the Thurston school.

I know you are all agog about knowing just who will attend Virginia Goldsbury when she becomes the bride of James O. Flower on January 11. Virginia you know, is the daughter of the Royald S. Goldsburys, of Edgeworth, and her fiance the son of Mrs. William S. Flower, of the Schenley Apartments. They'll be married at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon in the Presbyterian Church of Shields. Mrs. Walter S. Hoyt, of Stamford, Conn., has been asked to be matron of honor, and Genevieve Bell, of Pittsburgh, is to be maid of honor. The bridegroom-elect's niece, Patricia Ritchey, daughter of the John G. Ritcheys, of Pittsburgh, is to be flower girl. And there'll be a dinner and reception later in the Edgeworth Club.

Mrs. John Dean Brown, of Oak Knolls Farm, Wexford, announces the engagement of her daughter, Dorothy Westlake Brown, to James Lindsay Goehring, son of the Edward B. Goehrings, of Walnut street, East End.

Engaged To Marry

* * *

Louise Macdonald, daughter of Mrs. Joseph H. Bislas, is returning today from Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, Conn., for the holidays.

Margaret J. Kendrick Marries H. R. Barnett

Miss Margaret Jane Kendrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Kendrick, of Broadway avenue, Dormont, became the bride of Herbert R. Barnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Barnett, of Massillon, O., last evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the Dormont Methodist Episcopal Church. Officiating was an uncle of the bride, the Rev. John Gregg, of Boston.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with a veil of tulle finished with a Juliet cap of pearls and she carried white roses showered with lilies of the valley. Miss Hazel Washabaugh, as maid of honor, wore yellow chiffon taffeta and carried yellow roses. The three bridesmaids all carried pink rosebuds. They were Miss Margaretta Gregg, in pink chiffon taffeta; Miss Janet Gross, in green taffeta, and the sister of the bridegroom, Miss Florence Barnett, in blue taffeta. Burce Curtis served as best man and ushers included Karl Buehrig, Fred Heard, Roland McCreery and Jack Creider. The bride's mother wore green satin and the mother of the bridegroom, brown satin.

There was a dinner and reception in the home of the bride after which Mr. Barnett and his bride left on an eastern motor trip. They will be at home after January 1 in Dormont.

Member of Pittsburgh Chapter Honored on 85th Birthday; Radio Editor Speaks

The sixteenth birthday of the Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, which was celebrated yesterday, also marked the eighty-fifth anniversary of one of the charter members, Mrs. Fannie Loney Hooff. A decorated birthday cake lighted with 16 candles was presented to Mrs. Hooff, who was also the recipient of a number of individual gifts from the members.

The program feature was an enjoyable talk by Darrell V. Martin, radio editor of the Sun-Telegraph, who spoke on "The Romance of Radio," and answered most interestingly the many questions put to him by the members.

During the tea hour Mrs. Leonard Rawsthorne and Mrs. Walter E. Black presided at the table where the centerpiece was a little decorated fir tree. Mrs. W. E. Thompson, head of the hospitality committee, was chairman for the day, and Mrs. Adolph Hofmann presided.

DESIGNERS PRESENT NEWEST MODE IN FUR TRIMMED COATS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 19.—An endless procession of cloth coats, fur-trimmed, marches across the stage of the mode. Each coat is markedly different, yet all are most distinctly of the present season. Fur is lavishly but cleverly used, never being allowed to obscure the lines or design of the model, but rather handled as an adjunct to the design or silhouete. One sees very few fur borders at the hem, the unbroken depth of the hemline adding to the slimness and height of the wearer. Silver fox is apparently the fur of furs, with kolinsky, and mink not doing so badly either. Astrakan is extensively used for ever so many coats, and lately natural and black lynx has been introduced into the picture. Silver fox is much used in conjunction with broadcloth, the designers feeling that really this combination is better than that which uses rough woolens.

* * *

WE HAVE BEEN visiting the collections of the leading houses, and have culled from Paquin two of the season's newest and smartest coats. First is a model in rust colored wool duvetyn with the fur trimming in dark brown astrakan. Each puffed sleeve is slit at the top to reveal three insets of fur, a detail reminiscent of the cavalier period, but still well suited to the modern mode. A soft crushed girdle makes the moderately low waistline. The skirts of the coat are straight, but quite ample.

* * *

IN MARKED CONTRAST to the first coat is the model in black broadcloth with a huge collar and plastron front of silver fox. It has a slight flare and is belted just atop at the hips. The width at the elbow is gathered into double puffs and the lower part of the sleeve is close fitting, as are so many of the Paquin coats and wraps. Paquin makes the square model in green cloth trimmed with black lynx.

FILM PIONEERS -:- Good Old Days Weren't Always So Good -:- AMUSEMENTS -:- Critics Have Their Say About Talkies

Cecil B. De Mille Recalls Other Yuletides When Movies Were Young

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 19.

Though Wall street pounds at their gates, Hollywood producers may take a lesson in courage from that determined band of men who were ground-breaking for the industry back in Christmas, 1913.

Cecil B. De Mille recalls memories of that December when "The Squaw Man" was just about to be produced at the Famous-Lasky barn. Over at Sunset and Gower Uncle Carl Laemmle had just established himself on the Coast.

Cecil B De Mille

"On the day before Christmas, 1913," says De Mille, "we had a conference at the studio. I remember Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, Fred Kley (now in the jewelry business) and Wilfred Buckland, the art director, were in on it. Christmas morning we showed up again and did some more work.

HAD ONLY $20,000

"The talking picture version of 'The Squaw Man' cost $680,000. But when I started that first film I had only $20,000 to rent the studio, build the sets, pay salaries and produce the picture."

At that time De Mille was living alone in a little house on Lexington avenue. His family had not come from the East. Uncle Carl Laemmle was stopping at the Hollywood Hotel. Junior Laemmle was a child.

These men faced tougher times than the present crisis. But they persevered, and the motion picture colony stands as a monument to their courage and industry.

HOLLYWOOD FABLE

They are telling the story about the film leading man who was upstage to the heavy in one of his pictures. Finally the heavy backed him up in a corner.

"Listen," he warned, "either you treat me differently, or when we come to that big fight scene, I'll have my double whale the tar out of your double."

LATEST GOSSIP

Universal is distributing more than 200 Christmas baskets to former studio employes now out of work . . . John Barrymore's crest is a crowned king-snake. It goes back to Ireland. Just what was that story about St. Patrick? . . . Uncle Carl Laemmle, one of Hollywood's most respected producers, has been elected president of the Los Angeles Breakfast Club, where the principal dish is ham and eggs. Now those 30,000 hens on his Calabassas chicken ranch can expect to get busy . . . James Dunn is leaving for his personal appearance tour. He will do a song and a dance and will repeat that scene in the doctor's office from "Bad Girl" . . . Frank Borzage gave a Japanese party the other evening, supplying guests with silk kimonos and chop-sticks . . . An ambitious gent tried to persuade the Orpheum Theater here to pay him $1,000 to go up in an airplane and give a mental telepathy broadcast.

Leaves Wife $26,000 In 10-Word Will

A terse will, probated in the Register's office, left the $26,000 estate of Jacob T. Tressel, of 6926 McPherson boulevard, to his wife, Bertha C. Tressel, in these words:

"My beneficiary, my wife. My executor, my wife, without bond."

Mary P. Lang, of the North Side, was left the $11,500 estate of her sister, Eleanor G. Lang, by a joint will giving to the survivor the estate of the first to die.

Bride of 3 Months Granted Divorce

Her married life endured less than three months, Sarah Krisel, a minor, of 46 Cumberland street, Crafton Heights, alleged in her divorce suit filed in her behalf by her mother, Sarah J. Griffiths, in Common Pleas Court, charging Edward Krisel, of 2916 Middletown road, with cruelty and indignities. They were married September 5 and parted November 21.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

DAIREN, Dec. 18.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Plenty of excitement in these countries. Japan's cabinet resigned; China's resigned. It's funny we can't ever have any luck like that. Human nature and intelligence is about the same. The Chinese have planted a new big crop of soya beans and they haven't sold the last two years' crops. Don't that sound exactly like the wheat and cotton farmers at home? Yet we call them heathen—yeah.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Senator Reed In Hearst Newsie

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The great battle being waged in Washington against the proposed cancellation of European war debts to the United States is graphically presented in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, shown in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. Senator Reed, of Pittsburgh, and Senator Dill, of Washington, both declare in most emphatic terms that the cancellation would mean that the American taxpayer, already overburdened, would have to supply the money due us from abroad in the event of further cancellations.

From Moscow in Soviet Russia come pictures of one of the greatest military displays ever screened. It is the fourteenth anniversary of the Revolution. After the military parade 1,000,000 workers march before the reviewing stand and wildly cheer for their leader.

FAREWELL TO GANDHI

Mahatma Gandhi, toothless, smiling and still clad only in his loin cloth and sheet, is shown departing from Europe on his way back to India. In Paris Gandhi gives a farewell message through Hearst Metrotone News.

From within the historic cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris comes a Yuletide message of "Peace on earth and good will to all men." The famous boy choir of the 700-year-old edifice sings for the first time into the michrophone as the great organ peals its accompaniment.

NEW WAY TO REDUCE

Mark de Fonda in Los Angeles demonstrates a new reducing method. He places a young girl across the backs of two chairs and while she is stretched out rigidly places a huge rock on her chest while another man smashes it to pieces with a hammer.

In Queensland, Australia, cowboys hold an exciting rodeo that is as thrilling in every respect to any ever staged in America.

The biggest convention of twins is held in San Diego, Cal., to pick the prettiest pair of girls for the Misses San Diego for 1932. Many nationalities participate, including a pair of Chinese.

March, as Hyde, Finds Makeup Big Job

Nearly 200 hours will have been spent by Frederic March in attaining the weird characterization of Mr. Hyde in the talking production of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" by the time the film is finished, it is estimated. March, who is working with Miriam Hopkins and Rose Hobart under the direction of Rouben Mamoulian, will appear as Hyde for 25 of the 45 days of camera work necessary to produce the Robert Louis Stevenson story.

Eact time March creates his characterization of Hyde it will require five hours to don his makeup and finish the scene. The 25 days of Hyde will total 125 hours.

Fine Homestead Man Over Ice Dispute

Edward Barron, 25, of 217 Plum way, Homestead, was fined $5 and costs by Burgess Robert A. Morrow, of West Homestead, when arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct growing out of his alleged theft of a 50-pound piece of ice from the Homestead Ice Company. He said he took the ice intending to return and pay for it.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

A FEW DAYS ago I wrote a short piece about Chile Acuna and tossed some harsh words in his direction. I called him a "framer of women," and said that he was the most notorious stool pigeon in all history. For a period of several months this man was on the front pages of the nation in connection with his activities with the New York vice squad. And I imagine that my reactions to him were pretty much the same as the entire American public's.

In my mail today is a letter from him. I present it to you, in part, for several reasons. First, because it is a human document. And secondly, because this column is always open to anyone who wants a hearing. Here is his letter. Consider it well.

"It's a most dreadful thing," he writes, "for a soul to realize that one is not wanted, and to know that the best he can expect from the world is contempt or a little pity. Such a realization will drive a man to hell or to madness more quickly than anything else. It is such a bitter, despairing feeling that I can't describe it, even though I have been experiencing it for a long, long while.

"I know I am not needed. I know I am hated. And I know that I am pitied. The most redemptive power in one's life is to feel that one is needed. This I can't expect. No matter what I do or say, I will be considered low and contemptible.

"But I can't do anything about it. I can't complain, and deceive myself with the thought that those who hate me are narrow-minded, intolerant or priggish. No. I can't deceive myself. I am fully aware of the fact that it is all my own fault, whether the result of my own mistakes, my vices, my weakness, or—as I believe—the result of unfortunate circumstances into which I was tossed by fate.

"I have really been going through hell for the past few months. I was quite happy before, even though I was nobody and worked like a horse. But since I became Chile Acuna, the stool pigeon, I have been miserable.

"I have been accused of things I never dreamed of doing. I have been called this and that. I have been insulted and forsaken by my friends. And simply because I did what I thought was the right thing.

"If I had wanted to cash in on the notoriety that was given me, I could have made thousands of dollars. I turned down many offers because making money was not the purpose for which I took the witness stand. I even refused $7 a day, for two months, from the police department. For the stories I did do, I have been paid almost $3,000. Nearly one-third of this sum was given to charity, and the rest went to my wife and kid.

"It hurts me terribly when I am referred to as a stool pigeon. Those two words burn my very soul. . . . But it hurts me much more when I am accused of things I have never done.

"As I have told hundreds of times—on the witness stand and in my stores—I began working for the Vice Squad toward the end of January, 1929. On the nineteenth of April, in the same year, or less than three months after I was initiated as an informer, I rebelled against the cops, because they had framed an innocent woman. I was bold enough to defy them, and I went to court to testify in behalf of the woman. As a result, she was freed.

"Three months later I myself was framed by these cops. They sent me to jail on framed evidence. I spent 11 months in the penitentiary because I had aided an innocent woman. Does this make me look like a framer of women?

"It is true that I was an informer. Or call me a stool pigeon, if you will. But I was never a thief. I never blackmailed. And I never framed any women!

"If I was as low as some people believe me to be, don't you think I could have remained a stool pigeon and make plenty of money? I accepted the dirty job because I was a fool and because I never realized how contemptible it was. But you must grant me one thing. When I saw the framing and the grafting, I was man enough to send the cops and the job both to hell, where they belonged.

"It may surprise you to learn that I could have 'made' at least $20,000 if I had kept my mouth shut instead of going to Seabury voluntarily. But I am not sorry—in spite of the suffering and misery that I have heaped upon the heads of my wife, my son and myself.

"It is no bed of roses for me now. But if it were only myself, I wouldn't care. How about my wife and son? Why should they be made to suffer? My little boy, of course, is too young to understand things now. But should he grow to be a man, branded because I was once a stool pigeon? The thought hurts, Mr. Hellinger.

"I have very few friends now, and they are all 'new' friends. My old friends have all deserted me. The new ones include several newspapermen whom you know very well. They are not after a sensational story. They simply know the truth about me, and they are not ashamed to say that they are my friends.

"Of course, as I told you before, not everybody knows all the facts. Such being the case, I cannot blame people for their wrong opinions. But when you said that 'Chile Acuna made his living by framing a number of women'—that hurt pretty deeply. From anybody but you, I would have taken the rap and said nothing. But, after reading you for so long, I can't conceive of you being unfair and unjust—even to a man who WAS a stool pigeon.

"I do not ask for a 'break' in your column. I will be more than satisfied if you will change your opinion of me. And I know that you will if you will believe that what I have said is true—and it is true!

"The cops who framed me were tried and found guilty. They were dismissed from the department. Other cops have gone to prison. Some girls were pardoned by the Governor. My conscience does not bother me, but I am terribly miserable and alone. And all this in spite of the new friends I have made and in spite of the fact that so many people have been kind to me. After all, there are far more who think of me only as a stool pigeon; a low and contemptible human.

"How I have stood it all for over a year without going insane is a mystery to me. I believe that my wife, my little boy and my new friends have helped me to withstand all this misery. But twist as I might, I can't get away from the shadow. Wherever I go, wherever I am, there is that voice that tells me what I was.

"At times I feel better and I almost forget this entire nightmare. But somehow or other, the peace doesn't last very long. Something happens to remind me of reality—something like your line that said I had framed so many women.

"Please believe me, Mr. Hellinger, when I say that I never did such a thing. More than that, I cannot say. More than that, no man can say."

Likes Stage

Dorothy Lee refuses to play in the new film, "Girl Crazy." She doesn't like the role assigned to her. Besides, she wants to return to the stage.

Penn Play Is Tangled Triangle

By GEORGE SEIBEL

There's a real Christmas tree in the picture at the Penn, and some little people who play and prattle quite happily. The rest of "Husband's Holiday" is not so happy—for it's about a tangled triangle which zigzags curiously in and out. Clive Brook should get a large bunch of sympathy for a Christmas present, since he has to walk through these zigzag scenes and remember if he can which lady he loves, when and why and how much.

George Seibel

There is also something in the story about a bed, a historic piece of furniture that means luck, but what sort of luck, why and how, isn't clear either. This couch was probably left over from the original play, called "The Marriage Bed," and the man who made the screenario didn't know where to store it.

"Husband's Holiday" is so disconnected and loosely arranged that you wonder who's who and what's what.

OLD FAMILIAR FACES

If it were not for the old familia, faces of Clive Brook, a fine actor, and Charlie Ruggles, a jolly sort, these people might have come from another planet. Of course they wear our fashions, very elegantly, and dance our steps, very gracefully, and we know they are human because one man "poisoned his mother-in-law with a fish." It may be that the censor, who doesn't approve of triangles, has tried to square the isosceles and scalene patterns. Perhaps if one went three or four times, it would be possible to piece the jigsaw together. Most people will prefer Laurel and Hardy.

REALLY FUNNY GUYS

There are two really funny guys who do "One Good Turn" to the taste of any queen or whoever it may be. When their tent burns up, and they put out the fire with the soup they must get food somehow. Laurel chopping wood is a joy as the flying logs hit Hardy's head. Hardy enjoys it himself.

There are also pictures of bucking broncbos that make your bones ache and a cartoon comedy that's very ingenious. Not to mention the Hearst Newsreel, with its amazing picture of the Soviet legions on parade.

Screen Veterans Cast In 'No One Man'

Veda Buckland, Otis Harlan and Jane Darwell, all of whom have been in pictures for 15 years, have been assigned roles in "No One Man," the picture featuring Carole Lombard, Ricardo Cortez, Paul Lukas, Arthur Pierson, George Barbier, Juliette Compton and Virginia Hammond. It is based on a Rupert Hughes story.

'Frankenstein' Opens On Davis Screen

"Frankenstein," picture version of the old fiction story about a scientist who creates a human monster, opened in the Davis yesterday, following its engagement in the Stanley. It will remain in the Davis one week. Boris Karloff portrays the monster and Colin Clive is seen in the title role, that of the scientist.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

After today there'll be no goings-on, as far as the legitimate theater is concerned, until Santa Claus puts "The Vinegar Tree" into the Alvin's sock Christmas night. The bright star decorating "The Vinegar Tree" will be Mary Boland. Seat shoppers who wish to storm the box office will find the boys therein ready for the siege by Monday.

* * *

Small Timer says there are cultivated voices and wild ones, and that the wild ones arise near where the others are being cultivated.

* * *

Leslie Howard, known to the screenies for his work in "A Free Soul," "Five and Ten," "Outward Bound" and "Never the Twain Shall Meet," and to the stagies for his work in "Berkeley Square," will be the star and co-producer of "The Animal Kingdom," which will open December 28 to light up the Nixon after a dark twain of weeks. The ticket scram will be on when Monday busts upon the radiant dawn, or shortly thereafter.

* * *

Small Timer says there has been harmony in his family ever since he learned to play second fiddle.

* * *

Dolores Costello's shadow, which has been hiding among the shadows for a long time, will fall athwart the Harris screen in "Expensive Women" today. So will the manly figger of John Bowers in "Mounted Fury."

* * *

Small Timer says the boy who tells his gal that she is a dream finds out after marriage that she was only that.

* * *

Warner is in the Warner Baxter is his other tag, and he's teamed with Leila Hyams. And they're having an affair of the heart in a screen "Surrender."

* * *

Small Timer says that on Christmas eve the wise child always knows its own father, no matter how white his whiskers may be.

To a Beautiful Girl

I'd like to buy for your delight
The choicest things that are:
To make your orbit swift and bright
As that of any star.

But truly the sincerest of
My covetings is this—
I wish for your sake, dearest love,
That ignorance were bliss.

By Way of Report

The current issue of Equity, the official organ for the Actors' Equity Assn., wastes a lot of time hating the dramatic critics again. Equity revives the time-worn joke that goes like this: That the critics should be barred who go in for wisecracking—that the critics exploit themselves at the expense of the poor actors. Poor, we take it, meaning incapable.

Now, if we were the editor of Equity, we feel sure that we could make the publication a profitable proposition. One that would bring in so much money that it would help support the Actors' Assn., so that the actors would not have to pay any dues and thus make ourselves the most popular persons in the world with the actors.

For instead of publishing such stale text, we would publish real red-hot news. News, for instance like this:

That right now the Messrs. Gillmore and Dulzell of Equity are the chief combatants in Equity's most serious internal war. So serious a war that Equity may explode at any moment, and wipe itself off the map!

As If We Didn't Know

Hoover says that things are getting brighter, but That Elinson Person claims that it is just the shine on our pants.

We've Met Him!

Then, chirps Howard Snyder, there's the con-man, who hands out so many bum checks, that from force of habit—he dates his gal ten days ahead!

Tee-Hee-Haw!!!

Martha Nilsen, of Ann Arbor, Mich., must be an amusing person. She signs herself—"A Mrs. But a widow by the grace of God!" Heheheh. Mrs. Nilsen, however, knows a good gag, even if it's old, when she sees or hears it. She read this in a paper, the name of which she forgot to mention. However, laugh at it, again—I still am:

Jones, who had a bad habit of teasing his wife, was motoring with her in the country the other day. They encountered a farmer leading a donkey on the road. Just as they passed the animal the donkey turned and brayed lustily right in Mr. and Mrs. J's faces.

Jones turned to Mrs. J. and sarcastically groaned: "Relative of yours?"

"Yes, dear," cooed Mrs. Jones, "by marriage."

A Dime a Dozen

According to some of the newspapers, Peggy Joyce has been hit by the depression.

Peggy will never starve for she can always call in the waste paper and rag man and sell him all her old marriage certificates.

Boff!

It happened in one of the better Chicago dress shops, Beatrice Lillie and two of the gals from her show were in for a fitting. The wife of a stockyard prince entered the fitting room:

"Oh," she oh'd haughtily, "I did not know show girls were here for a fitting, or I would certainly have made my appointment for some other time."

La Lillie burned up, but went in for her fitting. As she ankled out of the shop, she meowed within the haughty one's hearing: "Tell the butcher's wife that Lady Peel has been fitted and she may go in now."

Observation

Dana L. Cotie says nothing is certain in New York. What are this year's night clubs, may be next year's Coffee Pots!

Oop!

At one of the uptown cinemagogues the flicker "Alexander Hamilton" was being screened. George Arliss as Alex was shouting to the world in general how the passing of his bill would open the flood-gates of prosperity! Etc., etc.

The next moment the title of the following flicker was flashed. It was "Believe It or Not—by Ripley!"

Two-Doo-Loo!!!

Incidentally, several editions ago (Dec. 8), Mr. Ripley offered an interesting "Believe It or Not" when he drew a facsimile of a check that had nothing but 2s on it. It was dated 2-22-22. The check's number was 2222. The amount was $22.22 and Mr. Ripley would have us believe, too, that the Farmer's Grain and Supply Association of Merna, Neb. (per L. C. Highland), cashed it.

And the bank's cancellation was dated 2-22-22.

Well, here's one for my old pal Bob Ripley and particularly Mr. Highland of Merna, Neb.

Checks drawn on Washington's Birthday, a legal holiday, are not cashable—believe THAT or don't!

Sylvia Sidney Is Cast Opposite Morris

Sylvia Sidney, who made her screen debut only six months ago, now is preparing to start work with Chester Morris in "The Miracle Man."

Hotel Job!

Greta Garbo, Hollywood reports say, is to portray the role of a dancer in the screen version of "Grand Hotel," soon to go into production.

Former Pittsburghers In Same Picture

Irving Pichel and Regis Toomey will appear in "Through the Window," starring George Bancroft. Kay Francis will play the feminine lead and Louis Gasnier and Max Marcin will direct.

Skippy Again Champions Sooky

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Jackie Cooper is with us again. He's in the Stanley—this time in "Sooky." It is a follow-up on that previous film, "Skippy."

Master Cooper has his old role as Skippy. Robert Coogan again plays Sooky. And a number of other faces that were familiar in the previous film, appear in the current one.

Skippy continues his efforts of championing Shantytown and his little friend, Sooky. The snobby boys' brigade doesn't permit Sooky in its ranks, so Skippy doesn't join it either. He organizes his own army, comprising Sooky and himself.

Skippy's father is campaigning for the office of mayor in this one. And you can imagine his consternation when his son goes parading by in the opposition candidate's parade.

Jackie Cooper is a grand actor because he is a grand kid. He knows how to appear natural and to register every mood of childhood sincerely and touchingly.

The little Coogan boy isn't so natural. His speech and antics appear to have the made-to-order touch of adult supervision.

"Sooky," as a picture, doesn't arouse the enthusiasm "Skippy" did. Maybe it is because of the monotony of the theme. However, it is pleasant entertainment and Jackie Cooper is a youngster well worth the seeing.

Aviation Drama of Stage Going on Screen

"The Broken Wing," the stage's most ambitious venture into aviation, which was purchased by Paramount last summer, is to be produced as a motion picture in the company's Hollywood studios with Frederic March and Lupe Velez appearing in the leading roles. Lloyd Corrigan will direct.

Diaz Is Saved From Prison Term After Recovery Of Necklace

CHAPTER XXVI.

Connie was on her feet the moment she saw Diaz approaching.

"Sit down, mother." Laurel tugged at the orange velvet robe. But already Diaz, with a curt bow, had slid past them.

"Laurel, let go! I tell you I've got to speak to him!"

"Not now. He has to join in the pageant. The ball's going on all night. Diaz is in Mrs. Blank-Blank's party. We can easily locate him afterwards."

Lucky that Freddie and Roger were arguing over the menu, and whether they'd have white rock or ginger ale with the drinks they'd brought . . . so did not hear this conversation.

"Mrs. Blank-Blank has Suite 201 for the night, so later on when Diaz is feeling merrier and will open out more, you can talk to him there, Connie."

Laurel said this at random. Just now, until things shaped themselves, Diaz must not know that they suspected him. She MUST prevent a meeting between Diaz and her mother.

In the excitement of such an event, her mother would probably lose both her head and her temper, and create a scene, and blurt out the most incriminating accusations before those society people.

Damning gossip would be bruited about.

And she wouldn't get back her necklace, either.

* * *

Connie was unable to sit still. She had a terrible attack of "nerves." Laurel was afraid that Roger and Freddie would notice it.

She tried to divert her mother's mind from the loss of the pearls.

Should she, or should she not, let Connie hear of her visit this morning to the insurance company?

Who knows how Connie would take it! Better not say anything just yet . . .

The pageant was over, and a spirited colored orchestra was banging out a fox trot.

DETECTIVE PRESENT

Roger and Freddie seemed more interested in polishing off the contents of their bottles than in dancing. Laurel said to her mother: "Come on, dear. Let's visit the boxes."

She took her mother to some friends who had a loge, telling her she would return for her shortly.

Laurel then went in search of a telephone. She simply must call up that detective.

Re-entering the long corridor that ran by the side of the ballroom, she was stopped by a man in a monk's robe and cowl. "Everything's okay so far, Miss Oakes! Lissen, in 10 minutes from now, will you come up with your mother to Room 1027?"

She stared, astonished, at the man . . . then saw, beneath the half-drawn friar's hood, the red face of the detective!

"YOU here?" she breathed. "I was just going to telephone you."

"Sure it's myself. I had to rent this darn-fool costume or they wouldn't let me in! Not a word to anybody, remember."

"We'll be there—in 10 minutes' time—Room 1027," breathed Laurel.

Diaz was dancing with a lady of uncertain years. The man in the monk's robe and cowl went directly up to him.

He was sorry to have to interrupt, he said. It was a very important matter, and he was sure the lady would pardon him?

"I don't know who you are—" began Diaz hotly—but there was something in the expression of that mouth and chin jutting from the half-drawn cowl, that stopped him.

"I'll have to see what this fellow wants, and then I shall come right back to you, madam."

DIAZ HANDCUFFED

He bowed his partner into her loge, and turned with an ill grace to the detective.

"Well, what is it?"

"We can't talk here. I would like you to come upstairs."

"The hell I will!" Diaz was alarmed now. He had a "premonition" . . .

Where had he seen what he could see of this red face before? What disagreeable memory did it bring back to him? The man jerked back the edge of his robe. God! he saw a "badge" gleam!

One of his pals had warned him to keep away from here tonight! But with diamonds sparkling like raindrops everywhere, it had been too, TOO tempting!

FLIGHT! He must make a quick dash for it. . . .

But the detective was quicker. With a wonderful twist (born of long practice) and unseen by anyone on that crowded ballroom floor, he had clicked a handcuff on the wrist of Diaz!

* * *

"You've a awful nerve—" spluttered the captured South American. But his face had turned pea-green. And his legs were trembling under him.

"Take it easy now, and nobody will notice anything," grinned the detective.

The two men walked across the floor, very close together and talking in what seemed to be a friendly manner.

They got into an elevator.

Presently, with his free right hand the detective put the key in the lock of Room 1027.

They went inside. Before unfastening the handcuff that united them, the man slipped a hand all over Diaz' person.

"No gun? No knife? Then that's okay. But remember, you Diaz, or Taylor, or Rodriguez, or whatever alias you're under now, that I've got MY rod here, and one wrong move from you, and you'll be a candidate for the mortuary."

And with that he flung off the monk's robe and cowl.

NECKLACE RECOVERED

Diaz, temporarily let loose, glared at the speaker.

"I do not understand what you can mean—"

"Come off it, Diaz! I know YOU! Today I've done the round of all the 'fences.' I struck luck at last. I found where you pawned the lady's necklace—"

A knock came at the door. With his right hand nonchalantly in his trouser pocket, but holding the gun there in readiness, and with a sharp eye on Diaz, the detective opened the door.

"Step right in, ladies!" He admitted Laurel and her mother. "You please stay over here. You, Diaz, or Rodriguez, or Taylor, be seated in that armchair."

"But I protest. I don't know what you're talking of."

"You lie! And HOW! Ever seen that before?" and the detective whipped out of his pocket the missing necklace!

"My pearls! Thank God!" cried Connie, leaping forward.

"Hold on a jiffy, lady, till we get this settled. You—Diaz—you pawned this for a sum of $1500 at midnight yesterday, at Slick Joe's on Eighth avenue and Twenty-ninth street. I've got the ticket here. And, what's more, Slick Joe admitted it was you that did it. . . ."

"The lady gave them to me as a present." Diaz shot a meaning, threatening look at Constance which spoke volumes. "Eees it not so? Will you please explain it to this GENTLEMAN?"

But, the pearls being recovered, Mrs. Constance Oakes didn't measure her words.

"You dirty little cad and liar, THAT'S untrue. You stole them from me last night at Farini's—"

FACE LIFE CONVICTION

Diaz's upper lip drew back from his teeth in a snarl. He sneered, and there was menace in his voice: "Will you please say what you have to say—now—in front of YOUR HUSBAND?"

"Her husband's not in on this, so shut your mouth and keep a civil tongue in your head, Diaz, or it'll be worse for you!"

So spoke the detective.

"I tell you, the lady gave the necklace to me as a—a temporary loan. She ASKED me to pawn it! I was in money deefee-culties! She wish very moch to help me with putting up 'margin.' Now she deny it all," whined Diaz, "because she does not wish anyone to know how great a friend she was of mine—" he emphasized the word "friend," meaningly.

Constance went scarlet and then white, while the detective answered: "Well, you won't need money any more, not where you're headed for! It's your fourth conviction, and under the Baumes law that means life! And you can take it from me that splitting rocks in the penquarry is a lot healthier for a big he-man than squiring the ladies around and then robbing them."

"You mean—oh, Mrs. Oakes—CONSTANCE—don't let him send me for life to prison!" And Diaz made as though to cast himself at Constance's feet in his magnificent blue velvet costume.

"Stand back there! No monkeyshines or I'll put a bullet in you—"

But, terrified of the publicity that would accrue from Diaz' arrest and trial, and the effects of it on her reputation—and also actuated by a little human pity—Mrs. Oakes pleaded for him.

"Look here, whatever it is, I'll pay his fine!"

LENIENT WITH DIAZ

"Are you willing to hand back the lady that 1500 bucks you just got for her pearls?" asked the detective.

"I spent it," whined Diaz.

"Yeah, you would! I know your kind, you rat! Well—" turning to Constance—"what are you going to do about it?"

Laurel tugged at her sleeve. "Oh, mother, pay the $1,500 yourself—I've got $1,000 you can have tomorrow from my bank—and redeem the pearls."

"I will. But"—to the detective—"I don't wish to prosecute this man. I'll pay you a reward for the recovery of the jewels, and then—then won't that finish it?"

"With a dangerous criminal like this?"

But he was human, too, this man. He didn't exactly fancy himself as being the means of sending this young man up "for life."

"Hold on a jiffy till I think." Asking the ladies' permission, he took a cigar out and lit it. He sat eyeing Diaz, who had fallen back as though in a coma in his chair, and seemed to have perceptibly shrunken. "There's a ship going out from the docks at 6 a. m. headed Marseilles. Hey, Diaz! D'ja think you can make it?"

COULD he! And HOW! Diaz was ready to jump at it.

"Not so fast, young fellah—you don't shake ME so quick—I'm wise to you!" The detective drew a long puff at his cigar. "Until you're aboard that ship and the last gangplank being drawn. I'M WITH YOU!"

* * *

Diaz and the detective had departed. Constance faced her daughter.

"Laurel, you've been wonderful! I'm SO ashamed! And I don't know HOW to thank you!"

"Why, that's okay. It's you who have to forgive me for going to the insurance company."

"You did quite right—" Constance fingered her pearls miraculously restored. "I'd never thought of the detective at the Providence when I asked you not to tell anybody."

"He was mighty nice. And pretty square shooting to Diaz."

SECRECY PROMISED

Constance flushed scarlet at that name.

"Laurel, you'll never speak of it?"

But she meant 'him.' She knew—even to the most lenient of minds—that she had been a perfect idiot!

"Course not." Laurel slipped an arm into her mother's as they waited for the elevator that would take them back to the ballroom. She said, shyly: "Connie, I often wish we could be—you and I—sort of chummier?"

Constance was touched. This was more than she deserved at the hands of her young daughter.

* * *

At half past ten that morning she was at the offices of the Providence Insurance Company. With $1,500 in cash for the redemption of the necklace.

The affair was settled up. And Diaz—out of her life forever—speeding to the south of France.

When Constance returned to the apartment on Park avenue there was a sheaf of bills arrived in the second mail. One was from a florist, addressed to her husband.

Now, whenever Connie bought flowers for the house, or herself, or Laurel, she paid CASH for them.

She'd never run a florist's bill. Feeling that there was an error somewhere, she opened this one.

One hundred and sixty dollars—in two months—for ORCHIDS!

And for American Beauty roses—one hundred and eleven!

Constance blinked her eyes and looked again.

CONCEALS KNOWLEDGE

At the head of the bill was the address of the shop on Broadway, pretty far uptown . . .

She called the florist up, querying the items.

"But you received them, madam, did you not? You are the lady speaking from 987B, Riverside?"

Mumbling some evasive reply, with shaking fingers she hung up the receiver.

So it wasn't only SHE who had been 'idiotic.' There was also MICHAEL . . .

She handed him the bill mutely that evening. She was in a chastened mood. She'd been a fool herself. She musn't be too hard on him.

Scarlet flew to his usually pink face when he read it.

"Of course there's some mistake—"

She agreed dutifully: "Of course, there is!"

He shot her a quick look through his glasses. There was a something in her tone—even if it was determinedly pleasant . . .

He HADN'T been playing the game by her, poor dear! Suppose he tried to even things up a little, and ask her to the theater?

As she was getting her cloak, a magnificent spray of orchids arrived for her.

"For ME? Poor, middle-aged, passe, old ME," she murmured.

"You're nothing of the sort. You're a darn fine-looking woman, and don't you belittle yourself, Connie!"

When her husband wasn't looking, she took a quick peek at the label on the box.

No! OF COURSE NOT!

Bear Kills Mate; Fierce Battle Arouses Zoo

LISBON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Crispim, a magnificent Carpathian bear, was mauled to death yesterday by his cagemate, Morena, a ferocious she bear from Tibet. Their battle aroused the entire Lisbon Zoo.

Keepers rushed in with whips, poles and fire hose in a vain attempt to separate the roaring animals. Morena refused to desist until she had completed her kill. Then she allowed them to approach as she looked down in triumph at the torn form of her dead companion.

CIVIC CONCERT, WINCHELL ON AIR

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

PITTSBURGH MAY pioneer again in radio, this time in the field of television . . . At the hearing of the Radio Vision Company, of 230 Langley avenue, Pittsburgh, before the Federal Radio Commission yesterday, it was disclosed that the partners—James Allen, C. K. Krause, Anthony Mag and F. C. Wallace—not only contemplate operating a television station in Pittsburgh, but anticipate manufacturing television sets and accessories . . . Krause told a Commission examiner that the Pittsburgh area was entitled to experimental television facilities because of its peculiar topography . . . he said experiments along the eastern coast were of no benefit to this city, where our many hills and valleys make radio reception difficult . . . there were no protests against the application . . . a decision will be given later.

Donner-Roosevelt Wedding January 16

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Browning Donner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Donner, of Villanova and Philadelphia, and Elliott Roosevelt, son of Gov. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, will take place January 16.

The ceremony will be performed in the Church of the Redeemer at Bryn Mawr.

Paralysis Serum Sent for U. S. Test

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Two tubes of newly discovered infantile paralysis serum are being taken to New York from Sydney, Australia, for experiments to be conducted by the Rockefeller Institute.

The serum arrived here yesterday on the Union liner Makura. It was sent by Sir Charles Clubbe, eminent Sydney surgeon. The serum was the result of research work in Australia.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—For five days, beginning tomorrow, a tidal wave of Christmas programs will sweep over the parlors of America. Most of the concentration will be, as always, on Dickens' "A Christmas Carol."

Not even choral singing, not even chimes will displace it as the Christmas Eve midnight feature on one network . . . Development of international broadcasting makes Christmas celebration a spectacular climax of the radio year. This year the celebration will be more spectacular than ever, with London, Cambridge, Buremberg, Leipzig and other European cities on the air . . . Not one tribute, however, will be paid on the microphones to wassail. And wassail deserves a break. Scrooge or no Scrooge.

* * *

Automobile and tire makers continue to sign the dotted lines of the radio rajahs, determined to call public attention to their wares between snatches of song . . . . Lawrence Tibbett is their latest operatic earcatcher. And here are Leonard Cox and Nat Shilkret collaborating upon a word-and-music version of the Arabian Nights for a motor car company . . . Ravel's "Bolero" is again agitating the air . . . The most blatent ballyhoo in network programs seems to emanate from Chicago. But then Chicago hasn't many concert stars who, when they come to radio, insist upon the dimming of commercial drumbeats . . . . Wonder why vaudeville doesn't snare Fray and Braggiotti, most expert of the piano teams? . . . Lulu Glaser—you haven't forgotten her?—will make her radio debut tomorrow night . . . That new Park Avenue Hotel plans, we understand, to change its dance bands frequently in a move to divert the dear old transient public from its pant to the glossier speakeasies.

* * *

Democratic campaigners, looking ahead to 1932, are already racing the radio, are planning a series of—don't say, you can't guess!—why, of course, of course, Victory Dinners. And maybe they're not lingering on the word "victory" . . . . Republicans in the meantime are hiding their time. Well, it's good to know the big show has begun.

Leading Shares Make New Gains in Initial Sales: U. S. Steel Issues Rise

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP.)—The stock market extended its rally in the initial transactions today. Shares up about 1 point included United States Steel common and preferred, American Power and Light, International Harvester, American Tobacco B, Santa Fe and Electric Power and Light.

COLUMBIA WILL PAY IN STOCK

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Two additions to its board of directors and a decision to pay dividends on its common stock in stock rather than cash were announced yesterday by the Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation, through its president, P. G. Gossler.

The new members of the board, elected at a special meeting of the directors, are F. L. Carlisle, chairman of the board of the Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation, and Christy Payne, a director of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, in charge of natural gas operations.

In regard to the stock dividend, Gossler said a special meeting of the stockholders would be called January 14 to authorize the creation of 250,000 shares of convertible 5 per cent preference stock, convertible into stock for five years, at $20 a share. He recommended dividends on the common stock be payable next February in this new issue.

This dividend, it was said, would be paid at the same rate as the last cash dividend as a temporary method of conserving cash until such time as conditions of the security markets permit financing upon satisfactory terms."

WINTER WHEAT ACREAGE CUT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Fall sowings of winter wheat this year are reported by the Department of Agriculture to have been 38,682,000 acres, compared with 43,149,000 acres sown a year ago.

Rye sowings total 3,712,000 acres, compared with 3,993,000 acres a year ago.

The condition of winter wheat on December 1 was 79.4 per cent of a normal, compared with 86.3 per cent a year ago, and the condition of rye was 81 per cent, compared with 82.6 per cent a year ago.

The abandonment of winter wheat in 1931 was 5 per cent of the acreage sown, in 1930 it was 9.4 per cent and the 1920-29 10-year average was 12.2 per cent.

Kellogg Company Pays $5 Dividend

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Dividend payments of the W. K. Kellogg Company during 1931 will aggregate $7,500,000 with the payment of an increased quarterly return to stock of record December 15.

The company announced that the customary payment of $2 on December 15 had been increased to $5. Two other extra or increased dividends had been declared during the year.

The Kellogg Company officials some time ago announced that it had increased advertising appropriations and that it was in the midst of the most successful period of its history.

Copper Producers Nearing Accord

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Producers controlling over 90 per cent of the world's potential copper output are in accord regarding curtailment and have agreed in principle on practically all important details regarding foreign sales of copper. Some parts of the revised rules under which Copper Exporters, Inc., will operate remain to be worked out and probably will be definitely settled between now and Monday. Accord already reached covers the manner of selling out of surplus as consumption permits.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

16 PITTSBURGH CONTESTANTS WIN PRIZES

Girl Good Will Messenger Flies Here to Distribute Electric Floor Polishers

Sixteen Pittsburghers have been presented with electric floor polishers by pretty Viola McCrady, good will messenger who flew in from Racine, Wis., to distribute prizes to winners of a national floor wax contest which closed November 5. Miss McCrady is visiting 21 latex cities in a cabin plane to distribute 1,000 prizes.

Local awards were made to Mrs. Hazel M. Bart, 538 Hazelwood avenue; T. W. Dolan, 180 Kenmawr avenue; W. J. Doyle, 3870 Fleming avenue; W. L. Muller, 1824 Viruth street; F. A. Berner, 531 Fourth avenue; Joseph W. Rogers, 1213 Crucible street; Charles C. Dunning, 1815 Duffield street; Noah E. French, 53 Hemlock street; P. W. Hutson, 3134 Avalon street; Cornelius V. Janisch, Wellington Heights; Mrs. Ralph N. Moore, 60 Fayette street; Mildred Davis, 1733 Buena Vista street; Miss Louise Koenig, 2452 Park boulevard; Mrs. William F. Hieber, Glenshaw; Mrs. Gertrude Agnew, 2418 Saranac street, and Mrs. P. S. Freeman, 2836 West Liberty avenue.

GLASS DEMAND STILL SLOW

Except for continued activity on the part of sales staffs there has been no change in the flat glass industry situation, according to American Glass Review. Demand continues lethargic as it always is in the period of waiting during December to see what the new year will bring. Some glass is being purchased but the requisitions on factories are only to fill immediate needs. Production from units at present in operation is being held down as much as possible and will be held down over the holiday season.

With production of most flat glass on a continuous basis, it is not satisfactory to stop production altogether but it is possible to slow up operations and this is being done wherever possible. As soon as inventories are completed there undoubtedly will be some purchasing for distributors' stocks but whether this volume will be comparable with last year is uncertain. Despite much favorable weather since November 1, building operations, especially of the kind that consume much glass, have been slowing up and the outlook for any increased activity before March 1 is rather dark than otherwise.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY UP

Retail trade is showing much greater activity this week, the local department stores being quiet crowded, with volume of sales comparatively heavy, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Sales are very largely of lower priced merchandise.

More seasonable weather is stimulating demand for winter merchandise, and reduced prices are also helping to move wearing apparel. There has been a considerably larger volume of sales in jewelry lines, although prices have been greatly reduced in comparison with a year ago. Jobbing business, as a whole, is rather inactive.

The output of bituminous coal continues at a low rate, being estimated at approximately 25 per cent lower than a year ago. Prices are unsatisfactory.

Collections continue to average slow with jobbers, although retailers report a slight improvement.

Westinghouse Air Brake Pays Regular Dividend

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE DECLARATION OF THE regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share by the directors of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company late yesterday reflected the organization's strong cash position as well as the booking of large orders recently.

The company is expected to earn about $1 a share this year. This will cover half the annual dividend payments of $2 a share.

Net profit in the first nine months of the year was $2,603,410, or 82 cents a share on 3,172,111 shares of capital stock. In the first nine months of 1930 net profit was $5,699,152, or $1.79 a share.

Directors stated that the new orders recently booked indicate that earnings for 1932 will be no smaller than in 1931, but they sounded a note of caution in declaring that the declaration of a regular dividend at this time should not be taken as an indication that this policy can be continued indefinitely unless earnings improve.

Large Orders Booked

AT THE CLOSE OF the directors' meeting the following statement was issued:

"As anticipated, the net earnings of the company for the current year will approximate $1 per share after depreciation and reserve for taxes. Owing to substantial orders recently booked for brake and signal apparatus, the volume of business to be carried over will be considerably in excess of orders on hand January 1, 1931. This fact supports a reasonable assumption that the net earnings for 1932 will not fall below those of the current calendar year. A marked revival of business and a corresponding increase in orders for steam railroad equipment would naturally increase net earnings proportionately, but in the absence of such revival the board of directors do not wish the payment of the current quarterly dividend at the regular rate of 50 cents per share to create the impression that the payment of dividends on the same basis will be continued indefinitely. The company has 18,028 shareholders with an average holding of 175 shares. The number of shareholders is constantly increasing."

Current Position Strong

AN EXCEPTIONALLY STRONG current position built up over past years has enabled the company to continue to pay regular dividends during the present year in spite of the slump in earnings.

Current assets at the end of 1930 were $46,093,488 against current liabilities of only $3,789,773. Cash of $8,768,640 was more than twice all current liabilities. In addition the company held United States Government and other marketable securities valued at $20,452,984.

Assuming that the company will be compelled to dip into its surplus for half its dividend payments in 1931, $3,172,111 would be drawn from cash. This would still leave cash in excess of current liabilities without drawing on marketable securities.

Autocar Company Gets Large Order

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Autocar Company has received an order from the Sanitary Commission of New York City for 162 heavy-duty truck chassis at a cost of $486,000. This is the second large order received by Autocar Company from the Sanitary Commission in the present year, the earlier order being for 205 trucks. The order provides that delivery begin within 60 days and be completed within a period of four months.

STEEL OUTPUT OFF 3% FOR WEEK

Industry's Outlook Revised In Face of Recent Bank Closings in New England

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel ingot production this week has been at about 25 per cent of capacity against 28 per cent last week and a November average of 30 per cent. These decreases are seasonal, in keeping with precedent, yet they may be regarded as an unfavorable development because expectations had been otherwise.

In the latter part of October, when general business sentiment had been reported as much improved, there were predictions that October would be left as the low month in steel production, with successive monthly increases thereafter. November was in keeping, showing 8 per cent gain over October in the daily tonnage rate, but December quite fails as it will be under October and may not even average all of 25 per cent.

DEMAND RESTRICTED

Furthermore there had been an opinion that stocks were so low that there could be no year-end decrease of any consequence in demand. It appears, however, that some stocks can be reduced farther for January 1 inventories, while some consuming plants are closing for a week or two on account of the holidays or for inventory and thus have reduced requirements.

Decreases in the total volume of orders in the last couple weeks have been somewhat moderate, but a portion of the business is for shipment after January 1 and thus does not contribute to current mill operations. The change in the steel situation and outlook is ascribed to further unfavorable financial developments such as the closing of banks in New England, a region previously notably free from such occurrences, and the making of new lows by bond averages on the majority of trading days since the first of the month.

OUTLOOK GLOOMY

The outlook for any substantial increase in demand in the first month or two of the new year is not favorable. Doubtless there will be some rebound, making January average higher than December, but attainment of November's 30 per cent rate can hardly be predicted for earlier than February. Some sort of seasonal increase is virtually inevitable.

The steel price situation is causing more concern, not because recent weaknesses in certain lines have been very pronounced or are important in themselves, but because there is a change from the stable and indeed rigid price structure that existed for months, and when prices once start to move there is no assurance as to where they will stop. Reported losses of steel companies have been cited as a supporting influence but prices are far above the point at which a producer would get only his "out of pocket" cost by accepting a given order.

Rubber Exchange Amends Trading

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Transactions in rubber hereafter on the Rubber Exchange of New York, Inc., cannot be made at prices varying more than three cents a pound above or below the closing levels of the previous day, according to an amendment adopted by the board of governors and which become effective immediately. The previous price swing, or variation allowed, was five cents a pound.

Optimistic

PRINTING TRADE GAINS CITED

Pittsburgh printers, who consider their business a good barometer or indicator of general business trends, have voiced optimistic opinions concerning increased volume of sales during the last month of this year, according to William L. Hall, sole owner of one of the largest individually owned printing plants in the city, located in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Building, Telegraph Square. He said:

"There have been surprisingly few failures in the printing fraternity in spite of the depression we have felt as well as others. This is one of the first to feel the slowing up of business and also one of the first to show improvement. During the past month, business has been very good, considering that Christmas is not usually a busy season."

The opinion of Hall, whose business has been established 25 years, has been corroborated by statements from the credit departments of Pittsburgh wholesale paper houses, he said.

NON-DRAFT RULE COSTLY TO SLUGGER

COUNT BUZZ ARLETT among the ball players who lived at the wrong time. It's just because he was a victim of the diamond fates that he has been shipped back to the minor leagues after only a single season in the big show. The Phillies have traded the big outfield slugger to the Baltimore club of the International League for Russell Scarritt, former American League fly chaser, and the odds are about a thousand to one that Buzz will never return to the main tent.

Buzz Arlett

Arlett flourished in the Pacific Coast League for many years but had to stay there because there was no draft rule in force during his heyday. Any major league club would have taken him gladly at the draft price, and rather than lose him in that way his coast employers would have been forced to sell him at reasonable figures. But with no draft to be feared, the coast men were able to put their own price on him. The majors considered the price too high, refused to pay it, and Arlett had to stay in the sticks.

IT WAS NOT until a year ago, when he was 32 and past his peak, that Arlett was given a chance in the fast set, the Phillies buying him from the Oakland club. But it was too late for Buzz to make the grade. He had left his best years on the coast playing for minor league pay and one season was all that he could last under the big top.

So he goes back to the minors, probably for good, whereas if the draft had opened the way for him to come up while he was still young he might have enjoyed a long run of major league fame and big salary figures. The draft had been put into effect again too late to help the big slugger. His case is an outstanding one as showing that the suspension of the draft at any time is an injustice to the player and prevents him from advancing in his profession.

AS ARLETT GOES out, another former major league outfielder comes in again. Bill Cunningham, who used to play in the pastures for the Giants and Braves, has been signed as coach by the White Sox.

Johnny Butler was enrolled some time ago as the other assistant to Manager Lew Fonseca, so that the White Sox chief will have both a former infielder and a former outfielder and a thorough student of the game. He resides in San Francisco, just across the bay from the home of Fonseca.

GUESSING CONTINUES IN the East as to who will be chosen to succeed Johnny Law, as head football coach at Manhattan College in New York. Law, a former Notre Dame captain and guard, resigned after turning out good teams for two seasons. One rumor had it that Chick Meehan was to be appointed to the vacancy, but Manhattan College heads deny that a decision has been reached. Another former Notre Dame star who is to give up a coaching berth is Marty Brill, assistant to Lou Little at Columbia. Brill had intended to enter professional football, but is setting that aside, with coaching, to consider a business offer.

HERMAN LA MARK, of Coraopolis, coming back for the last three years at New York U., and brother of Joe, the captain-elect for 1932, comes to bat with a strong defense of Chick Meehan, resigned coach, in a letter to the student publication of the university.

Chick Meehan

"Would all this discussion have arisen if he had had an undefeated season?" La Mark writes. "I am safe in saying 'No.' We played the games, not Chick. He instilled us with play knowledge and a fine spirit to win. There was spirit lacking some place. With apologies to a number of students and followers, I think spirit behind the team was lacking.

"I have the utmost esteem for Chick Meehan and believe that he is an excellent coach. He is a great character builder. He takes a personal interest in every boy that steps on the football field. He delves right down into every boy's character and tries to uplift it. He is an advocate of good sportsmanship and stresses the fact that earnest academic efforts are conducive to athletic achievement.

"I know Chick personally and not through the newspapers. I hate to see him go. I hate to see him the victim of all this personal selfish sentiment, which a few individuals have tried to make us believe is the sentiment of the entire student group."

THOUGH THE FOOTBALL season had shown that anything might happen in sports, boxing followers were taken off their feet by the amazing upset in New York last night in which King Levinsky accomplished the supposedly impossible by winning a 10-round decision over Tommy Loughran. That somebody near the top of the heavyweight division might defeat Loughran had not been considered as being beyond the bounds of possibility, but there had appeared to be not even a remote chance that a wild swinger like the crude Levinsky, whom Pittsburghers saw some time back, would be able to get to the master boxer often enough and hard enough to knock him down four times and win the verdict on points. It was the greatest ring surprise in a long time. Levinsky must be given all due credit for his astounding performance, but, whether it was due to staleness or some other defection on Tommy's part, fight fans find it hard to believe that Loughran was Loughran.

THE ROSENBLUM BASKETBALL team, of Cleveland, now known as Rosenblum's Original Celtics, will appear in this section shortly after the holidays. The five will appear in Cumberland, Md., tomorrow, and then will travel towards home for games on December 27 and 28.

Saturday, December 26, is open for any team in this neighborhood. The Rosenblums may be booked through John J. Freund, Jr., Everglade 4297. He plans a big game here on January 6 between the Rosenblums and another strong professional team. The Rosenblums this season present in their lineup Pete Barry, Dutch Dehnert, Joe Lapchick, Davey Banks and Nat Hickey.

ANOTHER OF BASEBALL'S old-timers has joined the outgoing parade, this one through a decision on his own part to give up the game. Perhaps he was slated for the gate, anyhow, and may only have beaten his employers to it in announcing his retirement.

But at any rate Eddie Roush, veteran outfielder, makes it known that he is done. He says that he has decided to give up the game for good, and that, though he still is on the Cincinnati club's reserve list he will not consider signing a new contract.

Eddie Roush

THIS ISN'T THE first time Roush has announced his retirement. He was a holdout spring after spring, refused to join his club until it suited his convenience, and in 1930 he remained out all season rather than accept a cut in his pay as a Giant. Shifted to the Reds this year he played only at intervals. The old legs appeared to have gone back on him. In view of his previous retirement threats Roush may be accused of merely angling for the best salary terms possible for 1932, but he insists that he means it, and as the Cincinnati club is not likely to stand in his way, baseball has probably seen the last of the once master hitter, fielder and baserunner. Eddie is in a position to give up the game if he cares to do so. He made big money for many years and he saved it.

PANTHER 'B', RANKIN PLAY CHARITY TILT

By JULIUS LEVIN

Three high-class attractions are offered the followers of scholastic basketball tonight.

Coach Walter Gross' Schenley High passers make their first start of the season against the Pitt Freshmen in the Stadium pavilion, Schenley, always among the leaders in the race for the Section I toga of the City League, is reported to have another winning combination. Tonight's contest should test the Schenleyites to the limit.

RANKIN PLAYS PITT B'S

At North Braddock, Jock Rosenberg's Rankin High passers engage the Pitt Varsity B quintet in a charity game. The game will be played on the Scott High School floor. Rosenberg's team is undefeated so far this season.

Johnny Reed's Scott High quintet winds up a two-day tour tonight by engaging Erie Academy in Erie.

Scott High, of North Braddock, last night defeated New Castle, by the bare margin of 26 to 25, in their contest at New Castle. Allegheny High lost to Butler, 25-15; Homestead set down Taylor Allderdice, 24-17; New Kensington took the measure of South Hills, 33-23; Dormont tripped Langley, 28-21, and Beaver Falls bowed to Ambridge, 30-19.

WILKINSBURG BEATEN

Allegheny Vocation was defeated by Connelly trade, 31-20; Tarentum won from Vandergrift, 26-20; Rankin bested Edgewood, 21-9; Etna topped Apollo, 21-14, and Aliquippa tripped Sharon, 29-21.

Carnegie won from its Alumni, 19-6; Braddock bumped Swissvale, 34-28; Crafton defeated Bellevue, 29-18, and Duquesne knocked off Wilkinsburg 28-13.

Dribbles

Twin brothers are coaching and teaching at Mears and Evans City high schools. The Gregory twins, Frank and Charles, both graduates of Grove City College, are the mentors at the two schools.

Waynesburg College will meet Monessen High School in a charity basketball game at Monessen on December 31. Three former Monessen stars, Frank Janosik, Rab Currie and William Paul, are wearing the Waynesburg colors. Proceeds will be turned over to the Monessen community chest.

The Pitt Freshmen will be the attraction at Phil Bridenbaugh's New Castle High quintet at New Castle next Tuesday. Slim Wazio, one of the Panther mainstays, is a graduate of New Castle.

Ted Marmen, coach at Stowe Township High School, is eager to arrange a football game for Friday, October 21, or Saturday, October 22, either at home or abroad. Any Class A or Class AA school desiring either of these dates call Federal 1114.

Arthur Adams, director of athletics at Stowe Township High School, is coaching the passers at that school. Stowe has a promising quintet that should go far in section IX this season.

Scott High officials are dickering for a game with Lower Merion to be played on the same trip that will find North Braddock in action with Harrisburg and Steelton. Lower Merion is the team that Scott defeated for the state championship at the Stadium last winter.

Phil Bridenbaugh has a promising team at New Castle this season, according to reports from the Lawrence County seat. Four veterans who competed in the W. P. I. A. L. eliminations are back. Quite an attractive schedule of pre-season games has been arranged by Faculty Manager Ralph Gardner. After meeting Scott last night, the Lawrence countians tackle the Pitt Freshmen next Tuesday, Beaver Falls, January 5, Ellwood City on January 8, and New Brighton on January 18.

SPEIGAL SUSPENDED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Benny Bass, former junior-lightweight ruler, was one of four boxers reinstated by the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission. The others were Gene Buffalo, of Philadelphia; Eddie Brannon, of Pittsburgh, and Lew Raymond, of Baltimore. Mike Kushwara, wrestler, of Morea, Pa., also was restored to good standing. The commission suspended Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, Pa., boxer.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: NINE METHODS OF TRAVEL IN ONE VIEW—While it is not particularly unusual to find four or five modes of transportation in one view, the one I illustrated is the only one of which I know where nine methods of travel can be seen without turning one's head. Standing on the bank of the Wupper River, between Elberfeld and Barmen, Germany, one can see steam railroad trains, electric elevated trains with overhead rails, electric trolley cars, airplanes, motorboats, automobiles, horse-drawn carriages, cyclists, and pedestrians at a single glance. THE MAGIC SQUARE MONEY OF GERMANY—The Thirty Years' War had a disastrous effect on the German financial situation. With all of her valuable metal gone it was necessary to resort to some ingenious schemes to make her debased coins acceptable. The German fiscus hit upon the idea of the "Magic Square" coin. Superstition was rampant in the seventeenth century, and the population acquired the coins with avidity to hoard them as a magic talismen.

CARNEGIE TECH SET DOWN BY KENTUCKY

By H. C. Carlson

PITT BASKETBALL COACH

Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Dec. 19.—Purdue was far too good for Pitt last night and Wooden proved to be the closest approach to Hyatt we have seen. The Golden Cats were beaten, 41 to 23. Purdue started like a whirlwind, but just as the first half was about over, Pitt made one of those characteristic comebacks and went into the lead, 13-12. Then came the deluge and Purdue scored six points in two minutes. This drive indicated that the Pitt boys were headed toward a physical breakdown in face of the battering they were taking, but their typical courage shown resplendent and was appreciated even by the partisan crowd.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

It seemed that every shot Purdue tried was a success while Pitt shots just wouldn't stay in place.

PITT FIVE LACKING

However, I have not seen any school, any fine field house, or any squad of players for whom I would trade Pitt or these fine Pitt boys. We are learning each game. From the Wisconsin defeat came the Indiana victory, and, adverse to the dope, last night's defeat may mean a surprise for Butler tonight.

At that, a smarter coach might have steered Pitt to victory last night, which is consistent with my idea that when Pitt loses, it is my fault and when they win, it is due to the efforts of the boys.

An encouraging telegram from Duquesne University was appreciated. It may be news that Frank Lane, the handsome Adonis of basketball officialdom, last night presented his bride, who was Miss America in 1930. Still our heads are up. The lineup:

FOULS COST TECH GAME

LEXINGON, Ky., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Personal fouls cost Carnegie Tech a basketball decision over the University of Kentucky last night. The Wildcats turned back the Easteners, 36 to 34.

Led by Demoisey, sophomore forward who made 15 points, the Kentuckians showed the form that carried them to the final of the Southern Conference tournament last year. Jagnow starred for Carnegie, making 12 points.

Stentz and Raudabaugh, of Carnegie, and Demoisey, of Kentucky, were ejected from the game because of personal fouls. Though Carnegie made 15 field goals to Kentucky's 11, the 14 free throws made by the Wildcats decided the game.

The first half ended 20 to 17 in favor of Kentucky. Kentucky led throughout the second half, at one time 33 to 21, but a long shot barrage by Carnegie in the closing minutes narrowed the score. The lineup:

COLLEGE FLOOR CARD LIGHT

By JESS CARVER

Tonight's college basketball schedule is very, very light. In fact, it is so light that it resembles papa's pocketbook the day after Christmas, or my purse the day after any day.

Pitt continues its swing through the Middle and Far West by stacking up against the strong Butler College passers in Indianapolis, and the Techs, who've been flirting with fortune in old Kentucky since Thursday, complete a short road jaunt with a game in Cincinnati against St. Xavier.

All the other district collegiate fives are idle, and most of them will remain so until after the holidays.

The Tipoff

I've had some swell times in my short career, but it's been a long time since I enjoyed an evening as much as the one in Rimersburg Thursday. Luby DiMeolo and myself attended the annual high school football banquet there, and what an affair it was. After it was over, some of the good people of the town threw a little party in a private home that wasn't hard to take, either.

After DiMeolo and myself finished making our talks, the players and guests plied us with various questions concerning football and sports. Aside from one crack to Luby about the N. Y. U.-Oregon game everything went along swimmingly. Then one of the school players came up with this one:

"Mr. DiMeolo," he asked, "what would you say of a quarterback who would call a line buck on fourth down, with eight yards to go and the ball in the center of the field?"

"He'd be goofy," replied Luby.

"Yeah," came back the lad, "but the play worked for an 18-yard gain."

"Smart quarterback," was DiMeolo's comeback.

DiMeolo, by the way, will be in charge of the Rooney eleven in the big charity tussle at West View tomorrow afternoon and I, for one, am going out and watch Luby manipulate the professionals. As a manipulator, he's a wonder.

Rimersburg boasts a football player who played a regular tackle position after suffering a broken neck. Tee Gremo, a big rangy lad, was a too shallow spot, cracking up his neck. They told him he was through with football and all other sports.

The big fellow had other ideas, however, and as soon as he was out of danger, he began to plan for future activity. His injury healed very well, and early last fall, he made a special trip here to Pittsburgh, ostensibly to see a physician, but really as a stall. He came back home, told his folks the medico had said it was o. k. for him to play, and got away with it. He played regularly at tackle this year. One for Bob Ripley.

LOUGHRAN BOWS TO LEVINSKY

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—King Levinsky, wild swinging Jewish heavyweight, scored an amazing upset last night, knocking down Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia veteran, four times, to win the decision in a sensational 10-round battle before a crowd of 7,600, in Madison Square Garden.

Loughran weighed 183½, Levinsky, 194.

Loughran, hero of New York crowds, who have seen him toy with men like Ernie Schaaf, Max Baer, Victorio Campolo and Paulino Uzcudun, started in amazement as the boisterous kingfish belted Loughran to the canvas four times with rights and punches a novice should have blocked, and easily won the unanimous decision of Referee Arthur Donovan and a pair of judges.

AL WITTMER QUITS POST

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Under fire of alumni and undergraduate criticism for several months, Albert D. Wittmer has resigned as head football coach at Princeton University. His resignation was accepted last night by the board of athletic control.

Wittmer, who was line coach at Princeton under Bill Roper for nine years, from 1922 to 1930, succeeded to Roper's post only this year.

HAD TOUGH BREAKS

He was beset by difficulties of various descriptions almost from the start of his regime as head coach.

First an operation for appendicitis kept him in Princeton Hospital while the Tigers were going through their paces in fall training. Then, injuries to key men, notably Capt. Bill Yeckley and Jack James, handicapped the team. Not once during the season was the team at full strength.

The rout at New Haven, when Yale won by the huge margin of 51-14, was the signal for a new outpouring of criticism both from alumni and undergraduates.

"I feel that through the press and otherwise there has been built up such an overwhelming body of misinformation about the coaching at Princeton," said Wittmer, in his letter of resignation to Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletic control, "as to place a handicap not only upon me, but upon the players as well, and that my remaining under such circumstances would not be to the best interests of Princeton. I say this reluctantly, but definitely in spite of the fact that many members of this year's team have urged me to remain."

Dr. Kennedy, in reply, said

MICHIGAN SWIM STARS HERE

One of the most interesting competitions of the indoor swimming season is looked for tonight, when a picked team of local stars opposes the University of Michigan varsity team in a dual meet in the Pittsburgh Natatorium pool. The event gets under way at 8:30 o'clock.

Halaiko Victor; Taylor Breaks Arm

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 19.—Steve Halaiko, Buffalo lightweight, won a 10-round decision over Lou Petrone, Worcester, Mass., here last night without extending himself. Halaiko weighed 138 and Petrone 137½.

Joe Lyons, Buffalo, scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Taylor, Cleveland, when the latter suffered a broken arm in the second round of a scheduled six-round bout. Taylor's arm was twisted as the fighters came together. Lyons weighed 157, Taylor 161.

JACKETS INVADE INDIANS' CAMP TONIGHT

Heavy Squash Racquets Inter-Club League Program Carded Today

MILLER, FRASER TO BE BACK IN LINEUP

By CARL W. SHATTO

Charley Reid, coach of the Yellow Jackets, caught the Christmas spirit and dispensed a little good cheer for local hockey fans before leaving for Cleveland with his puck chasers today.

The Jackets meet the Indians in an International League fixture at Cleveland tonight, and Reid beamed like any well behaved Santa Claus as he announced that Earl Miller, center, and possibly Gordy Fraser, defense star, would be in the locals' lineup.

When Miller had to leave the game with Syracuse here Thursday after suffering a leg injury in the early minutes of play, it was feared that he had suffered a torn ligament. A more complete examination yesterday revealed that the hurt was a severe bruise and after submitting to a series of "bakings" yesterday and last night, the lanky pivot announced that he was ready to return to action against the Indians.

FRASER MAY START

Fraser, out last week with a crippled knee, had to be assisted from the ice after his leg buckled under him late in the third period of the Thursday fray. He still is in a greatly weakened condition and Coach Reid would not consider using him but for the fact that the Cleveland rink is the smallest in the circuit.

Charley figures that Gordy will be very useful even if he does nothing more than stand at his defense post and discourage attacking Indians. This is about all a defenseman has to do in Cleveland because the skating surface is narrow and there is little territory to cover outside the points. Fraser has been instructed to take no part in the Pittsburgh attack.

MILLER GETS CHANCE

Miller, a great back checker on any rink, should appear at his best in Cleveland for the home forwards will have less space in which to elude his long stick than Duquesne Garden offers.

Art Berlett, another Jacket defender, is afflicted with a heavy cold, but is able to do part-time duty.

The Indians at present tied with the Reidmen for fourth place, have dropped three decisions and gained one tie in their last four starts. The Pittsburgh icemen hope that their hosts can be persuaded to stay in this slow stride.

F. & M. RIDERS HERE TONIGHT

The Pittsburgh Polo Club will meet its first college team tonight when it plays Franklin and Marshall College riders at the Hunt Armory. Bliss Flaccus and Charles Gilliland, Princeton students, are home from school and will be seen in the Pittsburgh Club lineup along with David L. McCahill, of Shady Side Academy.

In the F and M lineup will be seen Allan Holman, new football coach at F and M. Holman formerly was a grid star at Ohio State University. He was captain of the Ohio State polo team when it won the Big Ten championship.

The third F and M player is Theodore O. Boettcher, former F. M. C. polo star. The game begins at 8:30 o'clock with Col. George Cherrington as referee. The lineup:

JOYCE OTTKE TAKES SWIMMING LESSON FROM JIM TAYLOR, KEYSTONE A. C. COACH

Youngest swimming class of the Keystone Athletic Club, the pride of Jim Taylor, popular instructor of the club and a former star performer in competition. He is a brother of John T. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., and formerly was at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

SPORT VIGNETTES

A man better known in the industrial world than he is in the sporting scheme of things, but who nevertheless is one of our finest sportsmen is Frank R. Phillips, president of the Philadelphia Company and a noted engineer . . . He is the man behind the campaign to raise funds for the needy in the Pittsburgh district, and was chairman of the committee that realized close to $29,000 through the medium of the charity football game put on by Carnegie Tech and Duquesne University at the Stadium recently . . .

At a banquet tendered the two teams at the Keystone Athletic Club a few nights ago he outlined the hardships of the needy in striking fashion and also presented a keen understanding of and love for sports.

It is not hard to figure out how a man of Mr. Phillips' many activities maintains his vigor and accomplishes big things. . . . There is nothing better than a lively interest in sports and a sporting spirit to keep a man young and active.

This executive, by the way, was a football player in his college days and he never misses a game at the Stadium.

Damon Runyon puts his finger on the main question mark in the proposed comeback of Jack Dempsey when he points out that the old Manassa Mauler's legs are not what they once were. . . . When Dempsey's legs began to fail him his throne began to totter and his day is long since gone. . . . His future as a fighting man is entirely behind him, although he still commands the admiration and respect of the sports world, and his friends are legion.

John Holahan and Buff Donnelli, of Duquesne University, attended a banquet for the Windber High School football team the other night, at which all of the players were attended by their mothers, sitting by their side. . . . The plan struck the local men as a fine gesture, and they may introduce it here.

. . . . . George Young Stribling in Cleveland. . . . They became pals, and a few days ago, Lumsden received a letter from Max, written in German, from Berlin, and it was not until the Scotsman dug up another German, Joe Godsis, of the German Sport Club soccer outfit, that he was able to find out what it was all about. . . . Joe gave him a translation, which, with the original, constitutes one of Lumsden's most treasured possessions. — HARRY KECK.

Between Rounds

Mario Gomez, of Mexico, was hurt late in the calendar three-act bout that he engaged with Kayo . . . back in training and will be ready to box again soon at his old weight of 126 pounds. He would like to meet Bobby McArthur, but Kiss or any one else around here is to please. His manager is Paul Lehr.

Roger Bernard can't be going so bad when the best he could do was to get a draw against Cowboy Eddie Anderson at Ohio Mich. Thursday night. Bernard, incurring his second draw vote in the event that Madison Square Garden may drop him as the opponent of Battling Glass on New Year's Day.

Seven amateur bouts will feature a preliminary session at the Johnston A. C. Wednesday night, one week from Tuesday evening.

Benny McArthur and Paul Orr box the main bout of a show in Fairmont, W. Va., Christmas afternoon.

MACMURDO DEPARTS

Jimmy MacMurdo, Panther star tackle, left last night for Chicago, where he will join the all-East eleven, which is to play an all-West team in the annual charity game in San Francisco. The all-East team, with Andy Kerr and Chick Harley coaching, will practice for several days in Chicago before moving on to the coast.

ENS REJOICES IN NEW POST WITH TIGERS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Winter golf and Christmas delights bring pleasure to Jewel Ens these days while looking forward to a new baseball assignment which holds a big appeal. Jewel has everything all set for the hoisting of the children's tree at the Ens' domicile.

The more Ens ponders his recent baseball decision which makes him assistant to Stanley (Bucky) Harris at Detroit, the more he is convinced he made no mistake in passing up at least one good berth in the National League and several other offers of an alluring nature.

A Chicago friend presented Ens with a costly set of golf sticks last summer. Jewel could not play during the baseball season, but in the past month he has been a regular on the links, especially on the Stanton Heights layout. As a result of his mountainous climbing, Jewel is in the condition of a boxer and he wishes to be in that shape when he takes up his new duties.

BAD OTHER OFFERS

Ens was made a lucrative offer by Bill McKechnie, manager of the Braves, and while Jewel hesitated about leaving the National League he feels that he has made a wise move when he considers conditions in Jungletown. His financial arrangement there apparently is fine. And Ens has a very high regard for Bucky Harris. Touching on Harris, Jewel said:

"I developed a liking for Bucky when we met the Senators in 1925. He impressed me then as being one of the smart fellows of baseball and later when I became better acquainted I realized Harris had the goods in big assortments. The Pirate-Tiger games on the Pacific Coast brought us together in a rather intimate manner and it was then I learned that Bucky was an exceptional gentleman. I am sure it is going to be a pleasure to work with and for him in Detroit."

Late reports from the home of the Tigers indicate that Harris and the other Detroit officials expect Ens to be of vast aid in the fortunes of their club.

GOOD PITCHING COACH

Harris has a number of youthful pitchers who appear to need instruction and Ens is exceptionally clever in working with hurlers of any age. Jewel watches every move of a pitcher on the slab and he knows what's what all the time a game is on. Other youthful players on the Tiger roster should profit by Ens' presence. Lloyd Waner, Joe Cronin, Eddie Montague and many other kids give Jewel a lot of credit for aiding them to reach major league stature.

Ens expects to remain at his Pittsburgh home until the start of the spring training season.

KLAUS ATTACKS YAROSZ' STYLE

The ballyhoo of the Ted Yarosz-Jimmy Belmont bout at Motor Square Garden Christmas afternoon, is under way.

Frank Klaus, manager of Belmont, fired the first gun today when he announced that he would seek a showdown before the bout on what he declares is an illegal, according to the rules, style employed by Yarosz to win his battles. Yarosz has yet to suffer a defeat in some 50 starts.

"He hits with the open glove and chops and holds and wrestles," Klaus said. "The rules state that all blows must be landed with the closed glove and that there shall be no holding and hitting or wrestling. I want the referees and judges properly notified to this effect and also to have Yarosz warned in advance of the bout. If he is permitted to continue the use of such tactics, Belmont will be instructed to do likewise, and what promises to be a good bout may develop into an alley brawl.

"I don't want any the better of it for my fighter, but I do want to have the rules adhered to. I have seen Yarosz slap and cuff most of his opponents about and win the decision when points should have been scored against him instead of for him, because of his violation of the rules, and I am not going to stand by and see him get away, or try to get away, with the same thing at the expense of my fighter."

That's Round One. Round Two will be the Yarosz reply.

It makes good reading and may help the gate. The ballyhoo battle is on.

GROVERS WIN, 27-14

TABERSKI BOWS TO GREENLEAF

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP.)—Ralph Greenleaf, of New York, 10-times world pocket billiard champion, stepped away toward his eleventh title with a 125-to-70, 11-inning victory over Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., here last night.

It assured Greenleaf of no less than a tie for the crown with the defending champion, Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, in position to equal him.

Rudolph and George Kelly, Philadelphia youngster, are the only two men yet to be conquered. Kelly will attempt to spoil the perfect record tonight and Rudolph will try his hand Monday.

Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, dimmed hopes of Philadelphians that a native son might finish in first or second position when he defeated Kelly, who had clung to second place for more than a week. Ponzi ended his 27-inning contest with an unfinished run of 75 to win 125-to-66.

CHARITY, TITLE TILTS CARDED

With the big all-star-James Rooney charity game at West View Park, and the final lightweight conference game on tap, fans have a couple of interesting battles to become enthused over today.

Since Manager Art Rooney has lined up Jess Quatse, Pitt all-America tackle, much interest has been manifested in the charity game.

CLASS B

No matches played to date.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Heavy program of court play looms this afternoon as Class B warriors of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association join forces with their Class A brethren of the fragile bludgeons in what is expected to be spirited pre-holiday inter-club competition. Today's combats will mark the debut of the secondary section of the local loop, inaugural festivities having been postponed from last Thursday until the weekend in order to offer team leaders a better opportunity for turning out their untried cohorts with the strongest possible battlefronts.

In the Class A tilting, McCook Reed and his pace-setting Pittsburgh Golf Club combine will invade the University Club precinct for a clash with Frank McClintock's crack Varsity host, which, having suffered an unexpected 3-2 setback at P. A. A. last Saturday, can be relied upon to rebound with vigor aplenty in their effort to beat back the onslaught of the flying Golfers, who opened their campaign a week ago by blanking the Allegheny Country Club. Meanwhile, at the Keystone A. C., Scotty Burke will head an ambitious Downtown aggregation with avowed purpose of rendering torrid the visit of the Keystoners to the bailiwick of Dave Gilmore, Aleck Robinson and the rest of the Alleghenians. The P. A. A. topflighters enjoy a day of idleness.

CLASS B PLAY BEGINS

The Class B division, featuring the Edgeworth Club, Keystone A. C., P. A. A., and Pittsburgh Golf Club, initiates hostilities with Edgeworth jaunting up to the Keystone A. C. and the Golf Club delegates barraging the Winged Head fortifications. Capt. W. A. Gordon, boss of the new and decidedly darkhorse Edgeworth squad, has announced that his starting lineup will include himself, Charley Woods, Bob Schmertz, Owen Odell, and either Bill Boggs or R. P. Goldsbury. Gordon and Woods are Harvard products and learned the racquet pastime on the Cambridge campus, where its popularity and excellence have attained proportions perhaps unrivaled.

Coach Ben Pope, of the Keystone contingent, likewise has released his list of starters. The Keystoners will flash J. O. Craig at No. 1, with D. J. Kennedy, T. C. Kennedy, A. W. Schmidt and Tom Ladd following in the order given. Pittsburgh Golf Club gallops to bat with an exceptionally promising array which includes Allen Humphries, Wilson McClintock, Graham McCarns, Harry Miller, Jr., and Dick Burdick.

P. A. A. will counter with a well-balanced and fairly experienced quintet still to be selected by Coach Harold Mortlock from among Jack Lauler, Jack Beatty, Bill Hutchins, Fred Hastings, Carl Henninger, Dr. Slocum, Dr. John O'Loughlin and Paul Sullivan.

CHANGE IN SYSTEM

McCook Reed, secretary of the Steel City squash racquets governing body, issued formal statement yesterday to the effect that circuit standings for the present season hereafter will be reckoned on the basis of individual contests won and lost, rather than upon the results of inter-team tussles as a whole. This ruling conforms with the practice for the past several years successfully in vogue with the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League. Championship awards in both sections of the squash racquets wheel will be parceled out under the foregoing regulation.

Rifle, Shotgun Events Scheduled

The Keystone Rifle League's opening matches are slated for tonight, with Port Pitt meeting the Victory Club at Butler, Butler Rifle Club engaging the Tarentum Sportsmen's Club at Tarentum, and Standard Steel clashing with P. R. R. at Verona. A Christmas Day shoot is to be held by the P. R. R. Rifle Club at Trafford, beginning at 9 a. m. Friday.

A series of shotgun and rifle events have been carded for today by the South Hills Sportsmen's Association. Turkeys will be given as prizes. The range is near South Hills Country Club.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Flatter Your Husband If He Is Susceptible to It

Do the other femmes make a fool of your husband?
Does the waitress wisecrack with him?
Does the hat-check girl throw him a come-hither eye?
Do the Baby Dolls at your friends' parties flock around and call him "Big Boy"?

And does he chuckle 'n' beam 'n' kick up his heels like a three-year-old when they do?

Yes? Then what do you do? Laugh it off? Or get burnt up like Lydia? Listen!

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Just what should a wife do when in a restaurant, a public place or at a party, there is one of those women who consider themselves 'irresistible,' making up to her husband in such a way that everybody except the dumbbell husband is hep to what is being pulled off—and the wife has to sit by like a fool and watch it all?

NOT JEALOUS

"It isn't a case of being jealous with me. I merely resent being made to feel like a fool, with everybody in sight snickering and pitying me. And I feel ashamed that my husband has no more consideration for me than to be a party to my humiliation.

"Every wife reading this letter knows these 'vamps.' Usually they're young women married to men a lot older than themselves, and the wives I've talked to, who have had experience with them, tell me they are at a loss to know just what to do.

"To try to point out to the husband the humiliation he is inflicting on his wife by noticing them, is only to find he thinks she is jealous. I suppose the logical thing to do would be to appear amused, turn to some good-looking eligible man and pull off the same stunt.

"I would like to know if you, or any other woman, has coped successfully with such a situation, and what tactics were used. My husband is not a 'chaser.' We have been happily married for 25 years, and he is too comfortably married to do anything outrageous.

CANNOT BE INDIFFERENT

"I know perfectly well he is not in love with any woman of this type, or likely to fall in love with one—that it is only his male vanity that is flattered by her attentions.

"But, as I said before, I cannot sit quietly like a dunce, with some woman goo-gooing into his eyes and acting as if she were going to kiss him or hold hands the minute my back is turned.

"Don't think by this that I watch like a hawk. I don't. I try to remember that I am a 'perfect lady,' but I am terribly afraid that sometime I'm going to turn primeval and hand one of these dames a wallop that will only get me a reputation as a jealous wife, and add to the vain satisfaction of the vamp.

"What the heck can I do? Talking to him does no good. And I am flesh and blood. I cannot be indifferent; and how can I keep my respect and love for a husband who seems to enjoy their advances, and is so inconsiderate as to humiliate me by showing it? "LYDIA"

What the heck can you do?

Well, first off, you can take a good big drink of ice water, and cool yourself off, lady. Then you can sit down, look yourself over, and see if you can't dig up a speck or two of humor.

Why should you let some cheap vamp get your goat, when you admit yourself that your husband is in no danger of falling for her? So long as that is the case your "humiliation" is largely in your own imagination.

GIVE HIM FLATTERY

And I'll gamble that those friends of yours are snickering, not because they pity you or think you're a poor, abused martyr, but because they get a bang out of the fact that you lose your head over something so silly.

Snap out of it! If you're going to get all burnt up over every coquet or tramp that crosses your trail, you're likely to have a pretty hot time of it—and find you've burnt yourself right out of house and home.

And if the big boy is so hungry for flattery, how about giving him a little yourself? I'll gamble it's been many moons since you told him what a Great Guy he is! You've allowed your marriage to get humdrum and grubby—and now you're sore because the Big Boy's trying to find a thrill or two that you haven't given him.

G'wan!

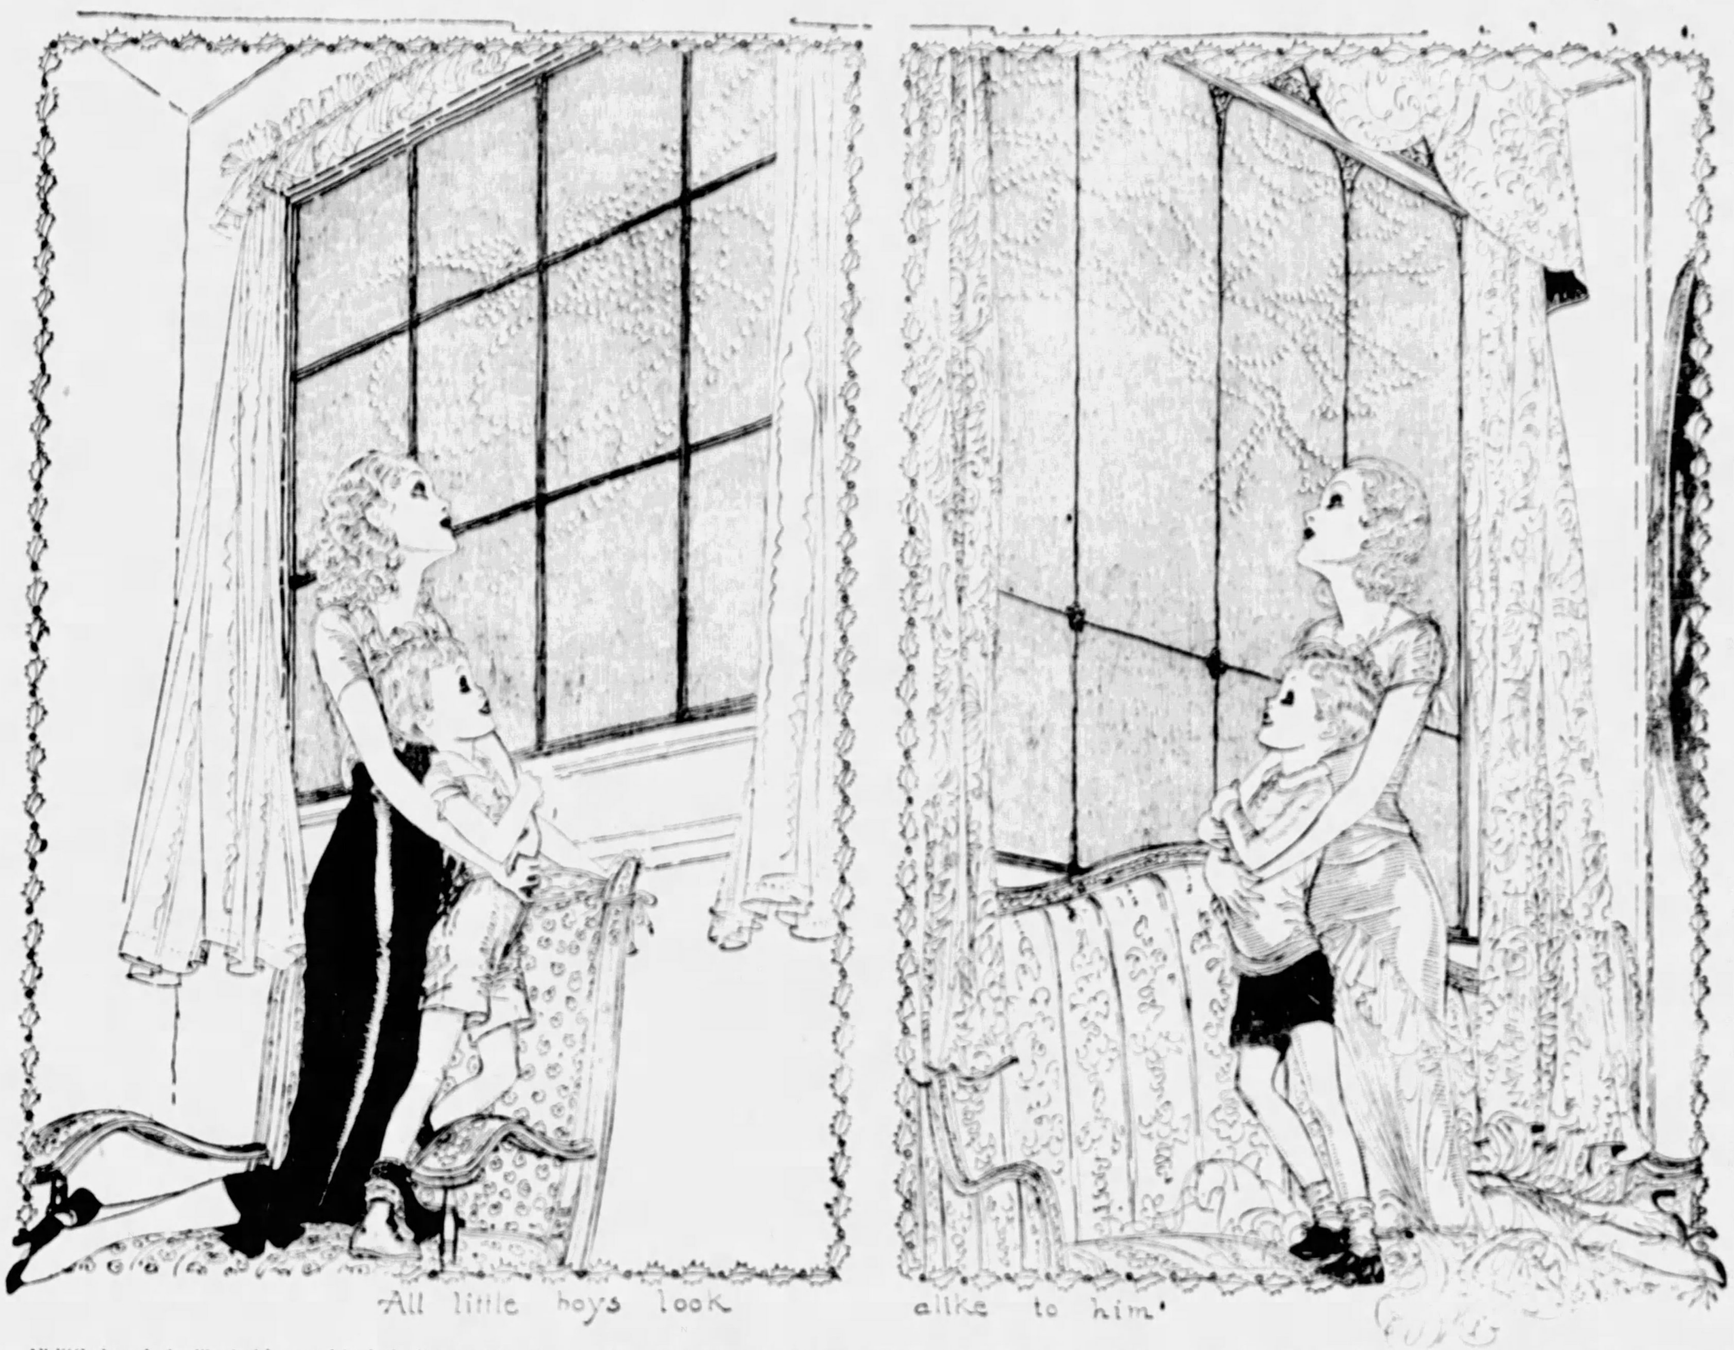
THE IMPARTIAL SAINT

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



All little boys look alike to him—and he looks the same to all of them. He is the patron Saint of Children—the Tiny Ones—and though he goes by many names, his looks, when he shows himself to a child do not change. Call him Saint Nicholas, Santa Claus, San Claas, St. Niclaes, Kries Kringle, Pere Noel, some of which fit him, and some of which are bestowed upon him in affection, what you wish—Father Christmas is the Angel of children. See how we grown-ups work so hard to help him "make good!" And why do the "ads" say, "—— and feel young again on Christmas?" Because Christmas and its Saint are for the little people—the tiny humans who can be happy without laughing and with a solemn face—alone among humanity.

Once the Dutch St. Nicholas—before he had to assume all the personalities of Christmas and wear the robes of "Pere Noel" and the "Cristkindlein"—had a day of his own—December the 6th—a gift night for children—his own particular flock.

But after New Amsterdam became NEW YORK, he kindly betook himself to Christmas Eve with gifts for the English child as well as the Dutch. What cared he for nationality and Days? It was the whole world of children he craved to bestow gifts upon, to shelter in his big red velvet coat! And the Christ-Child, from His place, looks down and smiles at the kind old Saint who has made himself Father Christmas on the Christ-Child's Day.

Rich Child, Poor Child, Middle-off Child—sees the same starry vision across the sky at Christmas time—the old Saint who is all things to all children, but who is as immemorably of the same appearance as Love itself!

NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

When Infant Fails to Thrive on the Artificial Foods

All authorities agree on the importance of mother's milk for the infant. Occasionally the mother does not have sufficient milk to nourish her infant. Under such circumstances it is usually the practice to wean the baby and place the child on bottle feeding.

Dr. Copeland

Many newborn babies, particularly those prematurely born, as well as babies who are very delicate, will not thrive on artificial food. This is true, too, of those who suffer from chronic digestive disturbances.

In such instances, it is best to provide mother's milk for the child. This may be done by engaging a nurse or by buying mother's milk from a hospital or from an agency.

In most large cities there are agencies where mother's milk can be bought. In many respects the use of this natural product is superior to the employment of a wet nurse.

The milk from such unusual agencies is obtained from nursing mothers who have an abundance of milk. The source of supply is very carefully checked as to its qualities. The mother who furnishes this milk, or the nurse, must be healthy, clean, and come from hygienic surroundings.

After the milk is procured by means of a suction pump it is placed in sterilized bottles, which are immediately refrigerated. This milk is delivered to the home, packed in small metal containers and surrounded by ice.

The general health of the nurse, as well as that of her child, is carefully investigated.

It is important to determine that she does not possess any disease that could be transmitted to the infant.

If you have an infant in your home who is not thriving on mother's milk and not making satisfactory progress on the bottle, consult your physician. If he advises mother's milk, by all means make an attempt to obtain it.

Answers to Health Queries

L. M. J. Q.—What causes the teeth to chip?

A.—Consult your dentist.

* * *

Ann. Q.—My baby of a year old has very little hair. She is very healthy. What can I do to increase the growth of her hair?

A.—This is nothing to worry about. Apply a little pure white vaseline or a little olive oil to the baby's scalp about three times a week. Nature will take care of this condition in due time.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Makes a Dramatic Entrance

Mary has an uncanny flair for the dramatic values of a moment, and her entrance into the livingroom was admirably contrived to convey the impression of the young lady of the house hurrying down to greet friends of whose arrival she just had heard. There was no slow, deliberate entrance, calculated to give people time to appraise her appearance. Yet almost anyone would have pardoned such an entrance, for she fully deserved the much-abused appellation, "beautiful," as she almost danced into the room and held out a slender hand to Noel with a cordial, "Well, boy, how goes it?" It was a greeting which might have been bestowed upon any intimate of the family, and held no slightest trace of the sentiment with which a girl might be expected to greet a returning fiance.

Her "raven's wing" hair, not so obstreperously curly as Marion's brown locks or the blonde ones of Miss Arlen, lay in smooth silken waves close to her beautifully shaped head and was gathered into the simple classic knot at the back which so few women can wear, and which therefore creates an unholy desire for murder among the acquaintances of the fortunate owner of features so perfect that they need no fluffy framing.

She had not made the mistake of putting on a new frock. But I knew that the filmy chiffon afternoon gown which had red roses running riot all over it, and which had been pressed and renovated for the trip, was one which brought out the perfect creamy pallor of her face and the color in her cheeks which usually needs no aid from rouge. I shrewdly suspected that her brilliant color had been helped a bit upon this particular occasion, though so deftly had rouge and lipstick been wielded that I could not decide with certainty that she had used them. But from the top of her silken head to the adorable high-heeled dancing slippers upon her shapely feet, she was a picture of the type which is popularly supposed to delight an artist's heart, and which patently was causing all sorts of havoc in Noel's breast.

"Mary!" he breathed, and there was a sort of awe in the word as he uttered it, as if he were realizing anew, after an interval of distraction, what an exquisite picture was this fiancee of his.

But Mary withdrew her hand definitely from his with a smile that atoned for leaving him, and went prettily over to his father.

"Welcome back!" she said with just the correct amount of pretty deference toward the man combining in one person a future father-in-law, and the arbiter of her theatrical career.

He welcomed her with apparent warmth—trust Philip Veritzen to avoid anything crude—and smilingly presented her to Mrs. Arlen, who scrutinized her with the smiling mask which women invariably assume when they meet a formidable opponent.

"Oh!" she said. "Is this your protegee, Philip, the one on whom you're counting to set New York agog?"

There was honey in her voice, but—I waited instinctively for what she would say next.

"This is the wonder girl," Mr. Veritzen replied, "but I must warn you again, Fanny, not to say anything about her outside. Only you, beside her immediate family here, knows of my plan."

"And you know I never will breathe it, Phil, don't you?" Her voice held an appealing, caressing note, and I saw Lillian's keen glance flicker over her face for the merest fraction of a second, realized what my friend was thinking. No one could guess what was Philip Veritzen's reaction to anything when he did not choose to betray it, but it was plain to any woman possessed of ordinary feminine intuition that the widow of Philip Veritzen's best friend would not be averse to forging another marital bond, with the great theatrical producer at the other end of the tether.

"I am sure of it." Mr. Veritzen told her, smiling, and then she turned to Mary again, and I fairly held my breath to hear what was coming.

"We have been so interested, my daughter and I to hear of your marvelous ability and ambition. Mr. Veritzen has told us so much about you, and Noel also, when he wasn't otherwise engaged." She let a little knowing smile curve her lip most effectively. "In fact, I don't know that I should have permitted my daughter to listen to such a fascinating fairy tale, if she were not so hopelessly feminine and domestic that no career ever has attracted her. Otherwise I am sure she would have been wild to emulate your example. It is so unusual for a girl to give herself so wholly to a career as you are doing, abjuring all thoughts of—everything else in your devotion to your work. You cannot know how we admire such enthusiasm, even if we never could imitate it."

She had not said "abjuring all thoughts of love and marriage," but her pause after the preposition, the Mona Lisa smile with which she had uttered the words "everything else," pointed her meaning as if she actually had said that Noel and his father had carefully disavowed all knowledge of his betrothal to Mary.

She had spoken in low, suave tones, perfectly audible, of course, to Philip Veritzen standing at her side, but which I do not think she meant Noel to catch. But Noel had heard enough to make him grasp my arm and whisper hoarsely:

"What does she mean? Is that what Mary thinks?"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Sending Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Kindly advise me whether or not the protecting tissue should be removed when mailing out invitations or Christmas cards?

IN DOUBT

It is far better to remove the tissue when you send out your card. The tissue gives an unfinished appearance to the card-and-envelope ensemble. There is just one exception. . . if you have been procrastinating and have not ordered and received your especially-engraved cards until the last minute, and if the engraver hasn't used especially good ink in the engraving, then you will probably find that the engraving "comes off," and it probably would be better to leave in the tissue. But if you possibly can avoid leaving in the tissue, by all means do.

A Definite Rule

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct for my mother to speak of my husband and me to my maid as Jack and Beatrice? I contend that she should speak of us as my daughter and Mr. Everett, or refer to me as Mrs. Everett? My maid is a fine type neighbor's daughter, but nevertheless she works in my employ and besides we are old enough to be her parents. READER.

You are thoroughly right about this. Your mother, when speaking to the maid, should refer to you as Mrs. Everett, and to your husband as Mr. Everett. This is a very definite rule in the world of form, and there should be no deviation from it.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

One way of freshening the skin after a busy day that precedes the heavy evening date is to wring a towel out of ice water, place over the face and cover with a dry towel. Keep on until the flesh is steaming and pink.

Choosing a hat is a serious matter. Some of these sassy lids don't put up such a good appearance at the back. Take an all-round look, consider the profile, consider also the arrangement of the hair. The wrong pose of a feather can turn a masterpiece of a face into a caricature, adding a comic element.

Complexion powders are no menace unless they are ground into the pores with too heavy a sweep of the powder pad. They act as protective agents against the ravages of cutting winds, strong sunlight and atmospheric dust. Many of them contain antiseptic properties, like boric acid. A dry skin needs a light powder, an oily skin accepts a heavy one. It is best to experiment with both and note effects.

Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Redoubles

An informatory redouble repeats the message of the preceding informatory double. The holdings below call for the bids indicated, by the dealer, second hand and third hand, respectively.

1 Heart. ♠K54 ♥AKJ62 ♣974 ♦J6
Double. ♠A873 ♥83 ♣KJ6 ♦AQ94
Redouble. ♠Q10 ♥1075 ♣AQ53 ♦K1085

The above double of 1-heart says: "Partner, I am weak in hearts, but otherwise I have a no-trump holding." The redouble states: "I am weak in hearts; I would have bid no-trumps or a suit had there been no intervening double. One weak suit now makes no-trumps questionable; I have no suit upon which I especially wish to bid. I hold assisting values in side suits for a rebid of strong hearts; if you have another biddable suit I either will support it, assist your first declaration, or go to no-trumps."

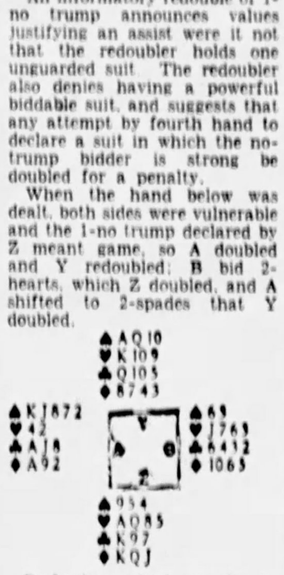
As 1-heart doubled and redoubled with score game, the redoubled forces opponents to declare something—possibly to the great advantage of the redoubled will score game, the hand shown above fourth hand will have to bid 1-spade (his only four-card suit), upon

♠J962 ♥Q94 ♣1082 ♦732

Of course the responsive declaration can be doubled and defeated, but it will pay better for first hand to rebid his hearts, as his partner then will carry him to game.

An informatory redouble of 1-no trump announces values justifying an assist were it not that the redoubler holds one unguarded suit. The redoubler also denies having a powerful biddable suit, and suggests that any attempt by fourth hand to declare a suit in which the no-trump bidder is strong be doubled for a penalty.

When the hand below was dealt, both sides were vulnerable and the 1-no trump declared by Z meant game, so A doubled and Y redoubled; B bid 2-hearts, which Z doubled, and A shifted to 2-spades that Y doubled.



Preferring a high penalty to the immediate rubber, Z let the double stand, defeating the contract by four tricks, and collecting 1,400 points penalty.

Good News for Little Girls!

The SUN-TELEGRAPH

DOLL LADY

Is going to extend the distribution of the Big

"Honeybunch"

Dolls until New Year's week. This has been made necessary on account of the great last-minute demand for this adorable Doll.

The above little girls have their "Honeybunches" for Christmas

Read the Doll Lady's Message Today!

Dear Little Girls:—

I never realized that there were so many, many names for girls until I looked over the list today of those who had already received my big, adorable "Honeybunches." I wasn't at all surprised that there are more girls named Mary than any other. Mary is a sweet old name to be adored and cherished for all time. Betty seems to be a mighty popular name. Then there are Janes, Junes, and Joans, Lou, Louise and Lois, Marilyn, Beverly, Mae, Martha, Irene, Rita, Rose, Eileen, Leona, Peggy, Madge, Margaret, Dorothy, Mercedes, Helen, Patricia, Angeline, Regina, Josephine, Ann, Freda, Esther, Gloria, Clara, Elizabeth, Natalie, Loretta, Agnes, Rosalie, Alice, Elsie, Lillian, Emily, Clarabelle, Eleanore, Isabelle, Selma, Phyllis, Catherine, Kathryn, and Kathleen, Mildred, Antionette, Bertha, Erma, Joyce, Arline, Emma, Edith, Jennie, Thelma, Lola, Celia, Rosemary, Shirley Virginia, Gene, Lea, Doris, Wanda, Roxy and others too numerous to mention. I'm not so sure about it, but I don't think that the boys cannot find as many names as the girls and, anyway, the girls' names all seem to be prettier.

Well, getting away from these interesting names, I still want to tell you that I am buried in work. But it is enjoyable work because it is bringing sunshine and happiness to so many little girls who might not otherwise have it for Christmas.

As I have so often told you, "Honeybunch" is just a big, gorgeous beautiful doll—DIFFERENT from all other dolls. She's richly dressed in organdy, has sweet dimples, a smile of sunshine, rubber hands and arms that can be bathed, rubber panties, a pacifier, and your heart will warm right up to "Honeybunch" when you hear her voice. She is almost as tall as the newspaper page is long—almost too big for many little girls. "Honeybunch" makes a wonderful playmate.

Now if you want a "Honeybunch" send me your name and address by mail today and I'll write and tell you how you can have a big, adorable dolly before the holidays. But you must not delay if you want "Honeybunch" for Christmas.

3 POLICE CHIEFS INDICTED IN VOTE CASES

Squire, Candidates, Office-Holders Also Accused In New Group; Total Now 197

A total of 29 additional election violation indictments have been handed down by the county grand jury, bringing the total for the September primary and November election to 197. Three cases have already been tried, resulting in two convictions and a discharge in a case in which Judge James H Gray found no intent to do wrong.

Four election boards, a justice of the peace and three chiefs of police are included in the latest indictments. The charges range from intimidation of voters to the acceptance of illegal votes and bribery.

Those named in yesterday's indictment were:

Edward Rieder, chief of police of McKees Rocks; Christ Keisling, police chief of Carnegie; Thomas J. Flynn, police chief of Duquesne; A. W. McMillen, veteran justice of the peace of Carnegie; Harry Keisling, Fred Mathias, Carnegie police officers; Michael J. Freil, delinquent tax collector, Harrison Township; Murtiford Shaughnessy, Duquesne policeman; Timothy Long, William Halley, Nick Spanovich, William Soltis and George Wallington, election board members of Duquesne; Chester Basid, John Patton and William Murray, election officers, First District, Fourth Ward, Pittsburgh; W. C. Stewart, Elizabeth Hinds, Edward Pierce, S. Montgomery and Thomas Ediburn, election board, Fifth District, Fifth Ward, Pittsburgh; Peter Shiller, O. S. Hixenbaugh and Joseph Koprvnikar, election board, Springdale Township; Edward F. Doehring, Edward Marian and Frank Smith, election board, Ross Township; James W. Johnston and Flora Paffenbach, overseers.

COMPLETE TUBE OFFER MADE

Officials of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway Company have submitted an offer to the County Commissioners to complete a traffic artery from the Downtown district across their bridge and through their tunnel for $4,200,000. The proposition was made at a conference late yesterday.

The railroad company's proposition is that the project will be built in accordance with the county's specifications and provide six lanes of traffic ramped from the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway's bridge to Ferry street, Second avenue and a 25-foot alley which will be widened into a 75-foot roadway.

The proposition will probably be submitted to the Planning Commission. Action by the present board of commissioners on the proposal is unlikely due to the limited time they still have in office.

Yule Paroles Given 2 Armistice Rioters

OLYMPIA, Wash., Dec. 19.—(AP)—Two of the eight men sent to prison following the 1919 Armistice Day riot at Centralia, Wash., in which four former service men were killed, have been given Christmas paroles by Gov. Roland H. Hartly.

Although Eugene Barnett and O. C. Bland were paroled, four—Britt Smith, John Lamb, Bert Bland and Ray Becker, remained in the state penitentiary at Walla Walla.

MT. LEBANON CITIZENS BACK WABASH TUBE

Community Group Votes After Hot Debate; Realty Man Urges Other Outlets

After a battle for and against the proposed purchase of the Wabash Bridge and tunnel of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad by the county, to be converted into an outlet for South Hills traffic, members of the Community Association of Mt. Lebanon last night voted unanimously in favor of the project.

The action follows a previous indorsement by the Board of Commissioners of the community.

RENEWS ATTACK

Reiterating his attack upon the proposed purchase, Oakley W. Heselbarth, real estate man, outlined his proposed solution of the South Hills traffic problem. He said:

"This bridge and tunnel are 27 years old, and $4,000,000 at least will be required to convert them into a suitable outlet. The ultimate outcome will be the construction of another tube, at additional cost.

"Much can be done with $4,000,000. For this amount S. u Mill Run boulevard can be completed, Banksville road can be straightened and widened to an 80-foot boulevard and twin tubes can be constructed, beginning at the end of Banksville road with a traffic outlet on West Carson street between Point Bridge and the new West End-North Side Bridge."

Heselbarth's statements were met with a counter attack by L. C. Clark, chairman of the township Board of Commissioners, who agreed with the real estate man's ideas but declared that if the residents of the community did not take what they could get they would get nothing. Clark said:

"The Commissioners went on record in favor of the purchase because we need a new artery and we need it badly. The purchase of this property will give us the necessary outlet within the next year, and that's what we want."

C. W. Scheck, Mt. Lebanon commissioner, criticized opposition to the purchase, declaring:

"A group of uptown people with no interest in Mt. Lebanon are backing this fight against the County Commissioners."

The project was outlined to the Mt. Lebanon group by V. R. Covell, chief county engineer, who, agreeing that virtually another tube would be constructed, declared the bridge and tunnel could be converted suitably into an outlet.

Crash Kills Wife, Hurts State Doctor

LIVERPOOL, Pa., Dec. 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Rose W. Campbell was killed and her husband, Dr. John M. Campbell, of Philadelphia, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases in the State Department of Health, slightly injured near here last night when their car collided with a truck. Dr. and Mrs. Campbell were en route to Sunbury.

Dr. Campbell told highway patrolmen he was blinded by the lights of the truck.

Dauphin Sheriff Nomed U. S. Deputy

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—(AP)—Charles E. Newbaker, Steelton, has been appointed a deputy United States marshal by Marshal Robert M. Vail. Newbaker will take office January 1, when his term as Sheriff of Dauphin County expires. He succeeds Charles J. Householder, Harrisburg.

Costume Slip to Size 50
Pattern 2256
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTION DIAGRAMS GIVEN WITH THIS PATTERN

By ANNE ADAMS

This costume slip is delightfully comfortable and most attractive. There are just two parts to be seamed at the sides. The lace trimmed top and hem may, of course, be replaced with simple tailored hems. Shoulder straps may be made of the fabric or of ribbon. Flesh, tea-rose and tan crepe de chine are favorites for lingerie this season.

Pattern 2256 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards of 39-inch material. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

Send for the WINTER CATALOG. It features the newest in afternoon, sports and house dresses, lingerie, pajamas and kiddies' clothes. Also delightful gift suggestions in accessory and transfer patterns. PRICE OF CATALOG 15 CENTS. CATALOG WITH PATTERN, 25 CENTS. Address all mail and orders to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.
2.—Write clearly NUMBERS of patterns and SIZE wanted.
3.—Write or print your NAME and ADDRESS plainly.
4.—If you want SUN-TELEGRAPH Style Book send 10c extra.
5.—Address your request to the
PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH PATTERN DEPARTMENT,
243 West 17th St.,
New York City.

Esthetic Invention, 'Color Organ' Not Patentable

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that although esthetic ideas are beautiful and charming, they are not patentable.

As a result, the court invalidated a patent granted to Mrs. Mary Hallock Greenewalt, concert pianist who has played with the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Symphony orchestras.

She perfected a highly sensitized mechanism which produced harmonious color schemes coincident with the playing of classics by orchestras or organists.

BETTER HOMES GROUP FORMS

Seventeen Pittsburghers who served on various committees during President Hoover's recent conference on home building and home ownership, will try to adapt the recommendations made at the conference to local problems. This was decided at a luncheon in Kaufmann's dining room yesterday, of local leaders in home ownership organizations, home financing and civic groups.

Several persons on the committees in Washington were called on for suggestions and reports on what their committees had recommended. John Ihlder, executive director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association presided. It was decided the local executive committee would report on how best to put into effect the lessons from the President's conference.

Among the speakers were C. F. Lewis, director of the Buhl Foundation; L. T. Stevenson, president-elect of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; Dr. M. C. Elmer, of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Marion K. McKay, of the University of Pittsburgh; A. C. Robinson, president of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company; M. W. Arheson, Jr., president Pittsburgh Housing Association; Dr. C. B. Mails, city health director; Mrs. Daisy Lampkin, of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, and R. M. Trimble, local architect.

Bill's Manner With Elderly Woman Leads to First Quarrel With Nevis

CHAPTER III.

In the spring, Nevis went to reunion. Returning, she told Bill: "It's just as you say—you feel out of it—somehow, I don't know why. Everyone can't feel that way, can they? I met a lot of the girls from the class ahead of me. All they could talk about was their babies and how they hoped that they'd be all right while the fond mothers were away."

Bill laughed.

"It's swell having you home. I've been awfully lonesome. Haven't" he went on innocently, "been home a night. You missed Olive's party, Nevis. It was a knockout. She had a palmist there and a fellow to read your bumps. You know the crack I got on the bean—in a game a couple of years ago? I've always had a bump there since. This guy said it showed great business instinct. I'd be a well known financier some day. You should have heard Sam shout. He and I stayed at Della's over night. Olive said she knew just the place for us down there. The people are going abroad for a couple of years. They'd lease with an option to buy. The rents rather stiff and they want to rent furnished. But I think it would pay us in the long run. We can't keep up with the crowd as things are now. And we have to keep up with them if I'm to do business with them. The house, the one Olive had in mind, is on Old Lynne Lane. She took me to see it next morning. You'll like it," he said enthusiastically, and got out pencil and paper to sketch the arrangement of the rooms.

BOUGHT AUTOMOBILE

She had an impulse to say, "Why didn't you wait for me? Did you have to go house hunting for our house with Olive Blanchard?" She did not say it, however. Looking over his shoulder: "That's the funniest looking set of rooms I ever saw. Haven't they any windows?" she inquired, mildly.

"I'm not an artist," he defended himself. "What do you say we run down there Saturday afternoon in the car and look at it?" he asked carelessly.

"Car? Whose? Sam's?"

"Ours! I bought it while you were away. One of Hunt's. He's getting a new one for Della. You know, the little roadster, the one you liked, dark blue with orange trim. It's only gone 6,000 miles and he's letting me have it dirt cheap. And that's another reason for moving out—so I can drive in," he argued ridiculously, triumphantly, "and save commutation! Besides, garage room here in town is something fierce. They soak the living daylight out of you."

Nevis said, helplessly: "Oh, Bill!"

"Well, why not? We needed a car. It's good business, isn't it?"

"We can't afford it."

"Sure we can. Besides, you've got to put up a good front in this job or you don't get anywhere. No use trying to sell gilt edge securities looking as if you didn't know where your next meal was coming from! What say, shall we go down and look at the house?"

NEVIS UNCOMFORTABLE

She was sure she wouldn't like it, wouldn't like anything Olive Blanchard had picked out. Olive with her this year's affectation of clinging gowns and green-lidded eyes and dim lights and fortune-tellers and incense. Olive, so Della had assured her, would get over it and would probably appear next year as a ...ome girl or an out-of-doors ...dy. Only this year Olive was ... in for being tragic and ...holy and mysterious and ... Nevis didn't dislike ... e wasn't, she thought ... here to dislike. Anyth... was all costuming and ... else's lines and stage ... She hadn't the remotest ...ea of what the authentic Olive was like—if there were an authentic Olive. But she had begun to feel uncomfortable at her slow, heavy-lidded ways, her feline pounces, her sudden claws showing and at the casual touch of her white hands with their painted nails on Bill's coat sleeve. Bill, darling ... come, take me out under the stars. I stifle in this atmosphere."

Well, not as thick as that, of course, but approximating it. And Bill, the poor, beloved idiot, falling for it. "She's not a bad sort, after all. Pretty good little sport. Pity she didn't get into the movies, she'd be a knockout."

"Pity," said Della, also, "she didn't make the grade in Hollywood so she could put some of this quick change emotion business of hers to work."

But on Saturday Nevis went with Bill to see the house. The blue roadster ran like a dream, smoothly, swiftly. Bill driving happily, hatless, the sun on his blond head, brown hands steady on the wheel. The roads were choked with traffic which they evaded by taking the short cuts Sam had taught them. Lilacs were out and birds singing and lawns and hedges green and there were blue, sparkling glimpses of the Sound.

"Has it all over town, hasn't it?" asked Bill, gayly.

TAKE EXPENSIVE PLACE

Old Lynne Lane was winding. Old Lynne Lane boasted quite old houses, remodeled, standing back from the road. "Their house was like that. Early American, well, not very early but early enough. White, shingled, with dull green-blue trim. A wide veranda, a wing flung out for a sun porch, glass enclosed. A sleeping porch upstairs and four serene bedrooms, sunny and gay with chintz and substantial with mahogany. Downstairs, a living-room with an outlook on gardens and old trees, a library, a diningroom and pantry. A long hall, a lavatory. "It's perfect!" cried Nevis, wanting it terribly, all at once.

There was almost an acre of ground and a two-car garage. "One bedroom and bath would do," suggested the owners, "for servants." Theirs had lived over the garage, they said, but the Lancasters could have a maid or two in the house, or a couple, and the back stairs are right there. That gives you three rooms and two baths for your own use."

Rent was discussed. Hearing the figures Nevis caught her breath. But Bill was perfectly collected.

"Like it, Nevis—?"

"Of course, it's perfect," she said, "but Bill—"

"When can we move in?" he asked the owners briskly.

So that was that. They moved in early in June, having sublet the apartment at a small profit. There was storage space for such of their furniture as they wouldn't use in the new cellar. Olive said, running over to see how the moving was progressing: "Wasn't I right?" I told Bill you wouldn't be happy until you had this house."

FAULTY SERVANTS

Nevis, tired, warm with the unseasonable heat of the day, looked very levelly at Olive. They could hear Bill whistling upstairs, directing one of the moving men. They themselves were standing in the living-room, the long French windows open to a vague fragrance of salt, a nearer perfume of early roses and honeysuckle coming into blossom, and of newly cut grass.

Nevis said, holding the taller girl's eyes with her own dark regard: "I was perfectly happy before, you know, Olive."

* * *

They had been living in West Lynne for about two months when they had their first serious quarrel.

They had come home after a party at the country club, a masquerade affair. Driving down Old Lynne lane in the hush before dawn, Nevis had leaned back in the car and, closing tired, burning eyes, had told herself that she had not only wasted an evening but had had a miserable time into the bargain and wished for nothing more than to sleep for a month. But she couldn't. Over the weekend Bill was planning a stag party, and she would have to make the arrangements and go over to Frances' or to Della's for the evening. Moreover, the couple they had engaged as cook-houseworker, garden-and-houseman and pinch-hit valet were not satisfactory. They were lazy. A good deal of Nevis' trousseau linens had been ruined by careless usage. Anna had actually dusted with one of her Italian drawn work table runners; and Bill's precious gin was disappearing more rapidly than even their lavish hospitality would warrant. Anna and her Paul must go. Which meant the sort of unpleasantness from which Nevis shrank, and meant, too, a hot trip to town and to the agencies on the usual hunt for non-existant domestic treasures.

"Fire 'em," Bill had said easily, on her complaint, "and get some more. There must be plenty. I don't see why you fuss about it, Nevis."

NEVIS DISAPPROVES

He had added helpfully that Olive never had trouble with maids.

And Nevis had retorted that well, why should she? She had had the same housekeeper for umpty-ump years, ever since in fact, her mother had died. Olive had nothing to do with the smooth oiled management of the home in which her hard-working, rarely appearing father maintained her.

Bill, she thought, had made rather an idiot of himself that night. Not a blessed idiot nor yet a darling one. Plain common or garden. That crowd from Westchester. Mrs. Harrison Bartlett—born Mary Marsh, married Smithers, left a relict, married Maynard, divorced, married Bartlett, the steel man, 50 if she was a day old, all large blue eyes and whipped cream manner. Bill had given her the rush of the season tonight; not the deference appropriately due a woman so much his senior but rather the attention due a debutante six years his junior. It had been disgusting.

Bill was good looking. All the women thought—and said—so. He had nice manners, too, an unusual thing in this generation. Olive Blanchard was off her head about him; she made it, thought Nevis, perfectly apparent. Not that she had had much head to lose nor that she mattered. Bill could never take her seriously. She made sex so obvious that it became uninteresting. And Bill laughed it off. No, she wasn't worried about Bill and Olive. She wasn't worried about Bill and anyone. But she hated seeing him all over the place about a woman like Mrs. Bartlett who could have no possible, even momentary attraction for him; who was silly and stupid and had nothing to recommend her but the gold spoon with which she had been born and the entire flat service with which she had later furnished herself by a succession of rich, richer, richest marriages.

"I was perfectly happy before, you know, Olive," Nevis remarked.

Back at home after that silent drive, Nevis shed her little wrap and wandered about the living room in the Pierrot costume in which she looked like a pert, delightful boy. Imbecilic costume, utterly uninspired. But she hadn't been able to think of anything else. They'd been to so many costume parties since their arrival in New York that her mind refused to work when it came to original ideas for camouflage. And the pertness had left her now, at nearly four in the morning.

She picked up things aimlessly and as aimlessly set them back again. Ambled about, yawning and dissatisfied, while Bill locked the garage. She had heard his step on the path. He came in, whistling. He was wearing the regulation uniform of a gob, loose, floppy trousers, blouse and on top of his blond head the idiotic white cap, set at an angle. He looked absurd in it and rather touchingly young and carefree. He lacked all dignity and knew it, was glad of it, she thought, wearily. It occurred to her as he came in, and went to the pantry with a muttered remark about a nightcap and then, with the glass in his hand, returned to go through an elaborate rite of locking windows and doors, that she saw very little of Bill, nowadays. That is to say, she rarely had any serious conversation with him. There wasn't time when they were together. They were always going somewhere or having someone in.

She asked, abruptly: "Bill, are you going to take a vacation from the office this summer?"

He was looking at the morning's yesterday's—newspaper. He answered, with some astonishment, perched on the arm of the couch: "Why, no. That is, I hadn't planned—exactly."

She asked: "But—if you could get a week or two? I'd like to go away . . . into the country. Not home, perhaps. Home would be almost as bad: people and parties and things. But we could take the car and stay places at night and have a rest and a change and get away from everyone. I'm getting pretty fed up with never being able to breathe without having someone count my respirations."

"Into the country?" he wanted to know. "But we are in the country. I mean, it's pretty pointless to have a place like this and then pack up and go somewhere else and stay at hotels, isn't it? That's one reason I wanted to come out here, so we wouldn't have to drag out maps and prospectuses in summer time. What's the matter with you, Nevis, losing your punch?"

"No. But I wish we could get away. Somewhere, for a while. Surely, Mr. Burton would let you, if you asked him?"

"As a matter of fact," he said, uncomfortably, "I—well, I think Harrison Bartlett is getting up a party, just men, to go for a fishing trip on his new yacht next month. He spoke to me about it tonight. If he asks me again I think I'll go. You see, we're trying to sell Bartlett—and that's the way to do it."

"Oh, you're planning a vacation, after all, without me?" she asked slowly.

"Why, no, Nevis. Don't be dumb, darling! Not a vacation. Call it a business trip. That's the way business is done nowadays, my sort of business, over a lunch or dinner table in a private car, on the golf links or the deck of a yacht."

She said, conscious that she was spiteful but unable to help it: "I suppose that's why you made such a fool of yourself over Harrison Bartlett's wife? So that you could get an invitation to go yachting with her husband."

Synopsis

It was taken for granted that Bill Lancaster would enter his father's lead pipe manufacturing business after he graduated from college. However, following his marriage to Nevis Hammond, he leaves the little Pennsylvania town where he was raised and goes to New York to sell bonds. The young couple give a house-warming. Among the guests are Sam Burton, Bill's college chum; Sam's sister, Fluff Waterford; Butch Dorgan, a classmate and his stage-struck fiancee, Marise Norton. Later, they make a round of the night clubs and Nevis and Bill return to their fopsy-turvy home at 5 a. m. For business reasons, Bill entertains lavishly. Nevis is forced to get a maid in order to keep up with his pace. Bill meets the much discussed Olive Blanchard. Sam warns him against her.

Points of the President's Message

Number NINE.

"Effective regulation of interstate electrical power as the essential function of the reorganized Federal Power Commission" is one of the outstanding legislative recommendations in President Hoover's annual message to Congress.

Mr. Hoover is right in saying that such regulation "is urgently needed in public protection."

His recommendation would carry more weight with Congress and the country, however, if it left no doubt in the mind of either that Mr. Hoover favors the amendments to the federal water power act proposed to the last Congress by Senator Couzens, of Michigan.

The Couzens bill, which the Hearst newspapers have long supported, provides at least a basis for the most effective federal regulation of interstate electrical power yet suggested.

This measure authorizes the Federal Power Commission "to require reports, prescribe accounting forms, make valuations and regulate security issues, both as to operating companies engaged in interstate transmission and as to their holding and managing corporations."

This measure provides effective regulation by the Federal Power Commission of rates and charges for power transmitted in interstate commerce for ultimate public consideration.

The Couzens bill proposes a new mechanism for the regulation of rates, charges or services by which the commission can act upon its own initiative or at the request of a state commission, a distributor of power or a substantial number of consumers of power.

And where a state has no power commission, the petition for the intervention of the Federal Power Commission may, under the Couzens bill, be filed by the governor of that state.

The value of the Couzens measure lies in the fact that it not only provides effective federal regulation of interstate electrical power, but it safeguards the jurisdiction of the states and strengthens their control over intrastate electrical power.

As one of its supporters has said, the Couzens bill is far from being the "insidious measure" its opponents allege. On the contrary, it is "a praiseworthy attempt to provide for a new type of federal regulation" where the public urgently needs protection.

Surely the American people have suffered enough at the hands of the power trust to know that protection against its tyrannies cannot longer be left entirely to the several states.

Senator Couzens has shown Congress how to set up a system that will utilize and co-ordinate state agencies of control and reinforce them with the power of the federal government.

Congress should legislate at the present session along the lines marked out in the Couzens bill and make the Federal Power Commission the effective agency which it must be if federal and state regulation of electrical power is to protect the public.

Coke From Abroad

A Pittsburgh District Industry Is Suffering from Foreign Competition—Comment on Local News.

The Department of Commerce reports that orders have been received in England from the United States for 12,000 tons of coke—an unprecedented shipment to this country—and that further cargoes will be booked within the next few weeks. The orders have resulted from the fall in value of the pound sterling, in relation to the dollar, a consequence of Britain's abandonment of the gold standard.

The manufacture of coke is an important industry of the Pittsburgh district, and the placing of orders abroad instead of with our own companies gives American manufacturers and economists something to think about, especially as [illegible]ortation of coke on such a scale is something previously [illegible]d of. The Pittsburgh district cannot afford at this time [illegible]usiness to European competitors.

[illegible]nt contrast to the news that we are losing coke [illegible]nglish firms is the announcement that conventions co[illegible]ttsburgh next year will bring about $750,000 of business [illegible]otels, stores and theaters. Sixty meetings have been bo[illegible]. The Chamber of Commerce is doing good work in [illegible]ge associations to hold their conventions here.

Pittsburgh cann[illegible]ommodate the largest conventions because we do [illegible]t have an auditorium that is big enough. It is to be hoped that as soon as the legal difficulties now surrounding the project have been cleared away the new County Commissioners will proceed with the construction of the Town Hall. Pittsburgh loses much business because of the lack of such an auditorium.

In admitting to bail a 16-year-old boy whom the police had been holding in prison, without the privilege of bail, on felony charges, Judge John P. Egan scored the practice of the police and police court magistrates of holding certain defendants without bail. He said it was unlawful. A number of police court practices are unlawful, but there is scant hope that the magistrates will reform.

The boy in the case that Judge Egan heard is said by the police to be a member of a neighborhood gang. There should be a boys' club in that neighborhood if there is not already one. Joe Mason, Philadelphia Boy Scout leader and student of criminology, who has been visiting Pittsburgh, had good grounds for his statement that boys' clubs tend to break up street gangs and keep restless youngsters out of mischief.

'A Piece of Outrageous Effrontery'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

That was a remarkable scene in the House at Washington when the erstwhile Republican chairman of the Committee on Banking, Mr. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, made a slashing attack upon the President. The purport of his attack was that the President had betrayed or "sold" his country in the interest of the international bankers; and that the price of the betrayal was the support of these bankers in the campaign of 1928.

Of course, the speaker was right in insisting that the international bankers, having made bad loans in Europe, want the billions in debts transferred from the backs of the Europeans to the backs of the American taxpayers to make easier the collection of the private loans. But the charge that this was part of a bargain entered into in 1928 implies the most appalling corruption and should not have been made without positive proof. For, if true, there is a clear case for impeachment.

The excitement during the incident must have turned on this specific charge; for certainly no member of the House doubts that the pressure of the bankers is responsible for the thoroughly organized propaganda in favor of making the American taxpayers pay the war debts of the world. That is common knowledge, and has been said a million times.

The extreme charge of McFadden does not alter the fact that this is precisely the fight that is being waged today.

* * *

Senator Reed's Statement

Mr. McFadden is a traditional foe of Mr. Mellon, but Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, is his traditional friend, and a warm supporter of the administration in the past. He is a corporation lawyer of distinction and cannot be accused either of making loose statements or of playing to "the mob."

And on the day McFadden was making his speech in the House, Reed was saying in the Senate:

"There is the other kind of propaganda coming from our own citizens who are interested chiefly in their own pocketbooks and in profits they will get from cancellation of debts due our government. I refer principally to those bankers and bond houses, who, since the Armistice and debt settlement, have put out so-called private loans to European nations, which they now would like to see paid by means of cancellation."

Thus far, Senator Reed takes precisely the same position that McFadden took. There is no occasion for excitement or "indignation" about that statement, for everyone knows it to be true. And then Senator Reed continues:

"They (the loans) were made by American bankers with eyes wide open to the situation of the debtor countries, with full knowledge of the prior existence of this government's claim and the difficulty that the debtors would have in meeting both public and private debts. Now to ask that those private claims of some American citizens should be given priority over the inter-governmental claims, which are the claims of all American citizens, seems to me to be a piece of outrageous effrontery."

"Outrageous effrontery." That is language almost as strong as McFadden used.

* * *

And Who Asks The Revival?

True, it is, that Senator Reed does not accuse the President of "outrageous effrontery" in words; but he does by implication. For when he was asked if he favors the revival of the war debts commission he replied:

"I do not. It can have but one result, and that is a further reduction of the amounts due the United States. Nobody suggests that we shall review those debts with a view to finding an increased capacity to pay on the part of any debtor."

Thus he says that the manifest purpose in reviving the war debts commission is to scale down the debts and transfer the amount "forgiven" to the backs of the taxpayers of the United States.

And who asks the revival? President Hoover.

Thus by indirection, but none the less clearly, he says that the President's proposal about the revival of the commission is "a piece of outrageous effrontery."

* * *

Much More Involved

To old-fashioned Americans there is much more involved in the manifest plan of the administration than the loss of billions to the American people to be made up by the taxation of the American people by billions to pay the debts of other nations. This is wicked enough in view of our condition, with our economic collapse, with our enormous deficit in the Treasury, with the appalling increases in taxation to meet this deficit. But there is a more serious theory of government involved. Are private interests, in a hole, to be permitted to use the instrumentalities of government to save their investments without the loss of a penny to themselves by going into the pockets of all the American people by law? Is the American government a subordinate agency of High Finance? Or its property?

Through no fault of their own, there are almost seven million breadwinners out of work and in need; but the government can do nothing for them. There are many millions of women and children without enough to eat or wear, but government cannot go into the treasury for them.

To take money from the pockets of all the people, by way of the treasury, for these victims of an economic collapse for which they are not responsible, is denounced with deep feeling as a "vicious dole."

Many are wondering by what sophistry it becomes a beneficent dole to go into the pockets of the people to the tune of billions to make good the investments for handsome profit of the international bankers.

* * *

A Most Glaring Illustration

And unlike the millions who are victims of the stupidities of economic policies, for which they are not responsible, these international bankers knew precisely what they were about. As Senator Reed well says, these went into these loans they want made good through the transfer of the war debts of the world to the American taxpayers, with eyes wide open to the conditions.

They gambled with their money on the possibilities of repayment; and the public generally is wondering if in their calculation on the possibilities they counted confidently on their capacity to use the Government of the United States to guarantee their profits; the very government which makes a virtue of its refusal to guarantee bread to hungry women and children.

For 50 years and more, private interests have used government in America to increase profits by law out of the pockets of the people; but there is a most glaring illustration, and the effect on the public or mass mind is doing no good to the international bankers.

Reed is wholly right; McFadden is partly right. But the one year moratorium has been pledged. "It was pledged by correspondence with members of Congress. It would have been wiser and more statesmanlike had the members of House and Senate replied to the President's letter with the short answer that if the President wished to consult Congress in accordance with the law he should summon it in extra session and get its answer in the "American way."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—A faucet in the bath put on an act this morning that was not only a lulu but turned me temporarily from the lilt of literature to the profession of plumbing. And if I ever sneered as much as that at the plumbing trade this is my apologia—with love and kisses.

It began when I gave a twist to the hoodus labeled "Hot," which usually just goes about its business of hotting. But this time it got all of a sudden snooty. Instead of cascading a warm flow, it began to scream like this—burgul, burgul, burgul.

"None of that!" I snipped. No water pipe can sass me, not before breakfast. I gave the gadget another twist and it burgul, burgled two octaves higher. But no water. I thought maybe I had been a little uncouth so I turned it off, then turned it slowly, gently.

This time its deep burgul turned sissy and piped a thin weedie, weedie, weedie. And then and I thought nastily, it spat out a half pint of water, quit again and baritoned another set of burguls. All the time I sat in a dry bath tub in thin-ribbed despair, getting madder by the minute.

Finally I wrapped a towel around myself—me and Mahatma—and went to the phone for a plumber. He wouldn't be in for an hour. So I sneaked up on tip toe and turned it all the way with one quick twist, hoping to take it completely by surprise.

The result was a single quick scream: Burgul! "Mr. Burgul to you" I snapped back and could feel myself losing control. You know, dry throat, buzzing in the ears and specks before the eyes. All the time I was counting—28, 29, 30—to keep myself in hand. But it was no use. The monster in me was aroused.

Before I realized I had grabbed a long handled bath brush, crashed it across the faucet, slammed the medicine cabinet door, kicked over a rubber-tipped chair and if there had been a door bell around I would have rung it. I was that furious.

* * *

What to do, what to do! I'm a wreck all day without a morning tub. And people expect so much these days. You'd think I touched off the panic. As a matter of fact all I actually did was put South America on the blink. Two weeks after they heard I bought a Peru bond, treasurers went into a huddle, grew beards and lit out for Paris with the swag, flopping the whole works into bankruptcy. Such teases, the Peruvians! And I'll use no more of their bark.

Anyway, I finally calmed and decided to give Old Burgul "just one more chance"—ta, te, ta, ta. I strolled over unconcernedly as though I might be nonchalantly adjusting the shower curtains, pushing them this way and that and with a sudden tiger spring gave the faucet a mighty wrench. With a snort it shrieked: Pa-tooey! Just like the zoom of shrapnel and sputtered off into a sort of tap dance—glickety-glack, glickety-glack, glack, glack. Spring is here.

It was then I went plumbing. And if I do say I plumbed a fairish plumb. With a screw driver I loosed the faucet handle. Then unscrewed the water pipe and for good measure turned on the you-knows on the steam radiator. I waited awhile and as nothing happened turned on all the faucets in the house, the electric lights and the radio. Still no water. And my skin got so dry I was getting chafed. I chafe easily around the first freeze and after the spring rains. Some day I'm going to give a chafing party. We have a chafing dish.

In my dilemma I phoned Verne Porter. "What do you do when your plumbing gets out of whack?" I inquired as nice as anything. "You again!" he screamed. "How would you like a long drink of iodine?"—and clicked the receiver. Anyway, it's a mild winter, as the saying goes.

* * *

Just then the plumber was announced. A Mr. Erfstadt, of the Red Bank, N. J., Erfstadts. I told him how I was struggling to get a bath and led him to the bathroom. He yanked out plyers, jiggled a few ipseses, twisted the gazunkus and Viola — hot water with a Niagara rush! Mechanics in one lesson! Easy if you just know. Some evening next week I'm giving an "At Home" and will take the hall clock apart. Or maybe I'll think up something even better.

Marry-Go-Round

Love, as a Fine Art

The man who cannot idealize his own emotions is a very poor artist at his love-making.

* * *

The old-fashioned girl may not have known as much about stringing the stag-line along as does the modern siren; but when she "reeled in" she usually had a marriageable man on the end of her string.

A rank amateur may try to win one woman by boasting of the others; but the true expert at woman-charming makes every woman feel that life, before he met her, was a total blank, and his heart a vacuum.

A man's notion of a "swell party" is the one where he had the best dinner; a woman's is the one where she had on the best clothes.

* * *

Charm: The ability to convince a man that you think he's as wonderful as he has always suspected he is.

* * *

If there were only one man and two women in the world, the man would probably marry the brunette, and spend the rest of his life trying to make dates with the blonde.

An attractive girl has to marry, these days, if only in order to get somebody to take her around who won't make love to her.

Dining in public with your ex-husband is considered "smart" this season. Oh, well, just because you are tired of pouring a man's coffee every morning, is no reason why you shouldn't enjoy letting him pay for your dinner, occasionally.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Hung your Christmas wreaths yet?

What's that you say? Not going to hang any? Times too hard? Don't feel like Christmas?

Yes, I know. Lots of us are feeling that way, and there's plenty of reason for it. But—never mind those reasons. Hang a wreath anyway! Never has there been a time in history when the old world needed wreaths as much as it does this year.

Sweet smelling fir and spruce, juniper, holly, and pine—

Gay, brave festoons against the icy winter night—

But wreaths are more than that!

They're a sign—they're a challenge—they're an ACT OF FAITH.

They're a sign that you're celebrating something, more than Santa Claus. They're a sign that you're believing in kindness and courage, in peace and good will.

THOSE WHO PASS IN THE STREET ARE NEEDING THAT SIGN NOW, MY FRIEND.

Tell them that you're keeping watch with love—

Who knows but they're waiting in the street—

Waiting for that old remembered sign?

HANG A WREATH FOR YOUR LAND!

For the land that your fathers bought with their blood and their faith in harder times than this—

Many a fat Christmas has your land given you in the past—

Given you out of her pride and her wealth and her strength—

Now she's hard hit—down on her knees—trying to get her breath after a vicious round—

Hang a wreath for America!

Tell her you're carrying on!

Show her you're as loyal to her when she's weak as when she was strong—

For your own fighting heart . . . for loved ones here and loved ones gone . . . and the land that gave you birth . . . hang a wreath!

And then—

HANG A WREATH TO GOD!

To the God who brought us up out of the swamp and the jungle . . . out of brute ignorance and fear and hate . . . and who sent HIS son as a symbol of that loving kindness which will some day inhabit the earth—

To the God who sees all and understands all and will give us courage and peace if we ask for it—

TO OUR FATHER IN HEAVEN—

HANG A WREATH!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

If you have a fair job and remuneration is steady, be thankful.

Perhaps you do have to work harder to earn it these days.

Some of the work which used to be done by others may have been added to your job, but what of it?

In some instances it may be true that men are imposed upon in the name of present depression, and compelled to do more than their share.

Notwithstanding, you should still consider yourself lucky to have work.

It is true that every man should be provided with the opportunity to work for a living and they should not be required to do more than a fair amount of work in order to earn it.

But exceptional conditions have made this impossible.

Output must be curtailed if it can't be sold, with decrease in labor required, hence the difficulty in finding employment.

In times like this the man who gets work of any kind should rejoice.

He should put forth his best efforts to be worthy of the place.
